DE VALERA DEFIES THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT

DENIES RIGHT OF BRITISH AUTHORITY TO SAY WHAT IRELAND SHALL DO OR SHALL NOT DO; REPLY TO CHURCHILL

Dublin, Ireland, June 1.—De Valera today defied the British Government.

Winston Churchill's challenge to Ireland to uphold both the letter and the spirit of the peace treaty was answered by the Republican leader in emphatic fashion. He said, "We deny the right of any British authority to say what Ireland shall and shall not do."

The British Colonial Secretary declared the Collins-De Valera agreement providing for a coalition form of government in Ireland imperiled the treaty because it admitted two Irish Government men who have refused to sign an oath of allegiance to the Crown. Churchill told the Irish officials they must sign this oath or Great Britain might be forced once again to assume authority in Ireland.

Belfast, Ireland, June 1.—The Belfast death toll for the past twenty-four hours mounted to thirteen this afternoon when John Keane, a truck driver, was dragged from his machine and shot in York Road. A child and ten other victims were in the city morgue today as the result of the killings of last night and this morning.

ANOTHER MEETING OF SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHERS SATURDAY

Elementary workers in the Sunday Schools of Clearfield county will journey to Clearfield on Saturday, June 3, to join in conference with the superintendent of the Children's division of Pennsylvania Sunday School Association, Miss Emma G. Lemen, of Philadelphia.

The call is to all teachers and workers in the grades of Sunday school scholars under 12 years of age. The conference will discuss the problems confronting such workers, methods of instruction, questions of graduation, cradle roll matters, and of especial importance will be the action in the direction of better organization and cooperation of the county and district Children's Division. It will be a meeting of far reaching influence. There will be two sessions, the first at 11 a. m. and the second at 1:30 p. m., in the Presbyterian church.

PROBLEM OF WARD- PETERS SLAYING NO NEARER SOLUTION

White Plains, N. Y., June 1.—Increased activity in the investigation of the slaying of Clarence Peters by Walter S. Ward was noticeable here today. It was learned that the Pinkerton Detective Agency has been employed to assist West Chester county officials in their attempt to unravel the deep mystery. The chief of police of New Rochelle, where Ward was a commissioner, told District Attorney Waite that he gave Ward a 32 calibre Smith & Weston pistol some time ago. Ward turned a pistol of similar make and calibre over to the authorities last week and declared it was the gun used by Peters in the alleged gun battle on the lonely road where Peters' body was found. An examination of Ward's home failed to discredit his story.

FOREST FIRE RAGES IN OREGON, BURNING TIMBER AND TOWNS

The situation is the most serious around Cedar Falls which has been partially consumed by fire. Men women and children are fleeing to the open country for safety. Orchardists along the Columbia River and in the vicinity of Corbett, Oregon, are threatened by brush fires and smoke from the fires is sweeping into this city.

COMMISSIONER REED HEARS COMPLAINTS ON BUS LINE SERVICE

Ex-Judge John W. Reed, of the Pennsylvania Public Service Commission, presided at several public service hearings in the Arbitration room of the Court House this morning.

Among the cases heard was the complaint of the citizens of the Paradise section who find fault with the service given them by the Fullington Auto Bus Company. They complain because the present schedule provides for but every other bus proceeding to the end of the improved road. They ask that every bus traverse the road to the end of the line and objection was also made to the ten cent fare charged for the extreme distance.

The Auto Bus Company contends that "every other bus" is ample to take care of the business at the end of the line and even that service is given at a loss.

Considerable testimony was taken, which will later be reviewed by the full Public Service Commission and a decision rendered.

The application of the Edwards Motor Transit Company of Curwensville, for a certificate for a bus line between Curwensville and DuBois was also heard. The Pennsylvania Railroad Company, represented by Passenger Agent Morris Langacre of Harrisburg, and local Counsel J. P. O'Laughlin, made a fight against the granting of the certificate, alleging it would interfere with the railroad's revenues.

MAN WHO SOUGHT PRESIDENCY THREE TIMES IS DEAD

Pana, Ill., May 31.—Henry E. Simpson, 32 years old, of Pana, who three times sought the Presidency, died yesterday at Broken Arrow, Okla., where he had gone on account of his health. A candidate before the Republican national convention in 1880, Mr. Simpson lost the nomination. Mr. Simpson lost the nomination to President Garfield. He made a second attempt for nomination with the so-called Greenback party, but failed again and dropped out of politics until 1912, when he organized the People's Christian Party and was its presidential nominee.

GOVERNOR PARDONS EVANS AND YEAKLE, RAILROAD WORKERS

Governor Sproul last night pardoned Charles L. Evans and Walter Yeakle, convicted conductor and engineer, of the Reading Railway train which was wrecked at Bryn Athyn. Evans on March 20 began a nine months' sentence in the Montgomery County Prison and Yeakle a six months' sentence. Both were fined $500 each.

The pardon of the conductor and engineer was recommended by the State Pardon Board, every member of the Board signing the recommendation.

Yeakle and Evans were convicted in Norristown on February 18 of having disobeyed orders in causing the Bryn Athyn wreck in which twenty seven persons were killed and seventy injured. The jury brought in a verdict of guilty only after being out all night and taken more than 200 ballots. Though the jury found the men guilty of disobedience it recommended mercy.

MR. and Mrs. C. Derrick, Miss Sara Hoover and Miss Pearl Hoover attended the funeral of the late John Dale Keith at his home at Phillipsburg Pa., today. The deceased was a brother of E. M. Keith, formerly of Clearfield. He was a bright and energetic boy and a member of the Methodist Church at Phillipsburg, and had a host of friends here who knew him when he made his home with his brother.

NON-UNION MINES MAKE AGREEMENT ON PRICE OF OUTPUT

Washington, D. C. June 1.—The American public will pay from 10% to 15% less for coal so long as the mine strike continues. It was determined here today under an agreement between Secretary of Commerce Hoover and the non-union operators. Departmental and Congressional officials said this action was assured as a result of the conference. Prices will be based on a rate of $3.00 per ton at the mines. Practically every non-union district has submitted its fair price scale to the newly appointed central committee which will sit at Washington to co-ordinate orders and shipments. The figures range from $2.45 to $3.50 for the various localities. The highest demand is made by the Southern West Virginia coal fields where the $3.50 price will obtain for the highest grade of coal. The lowest is the Alabama field where the $2.45 price will predominate. These figures are considerably under those that have been charged in the last few weeks and Government estimators placed the drop at from 10 to 15 per cent.

A LETTER FROM DR. HIWALE

The Editor Clearfield Progress
Clearfield, Pa.

Dear Sir:
On the occasion of my departure from Clearfield, it became quite impossible for me to extend my thanks personally to many friends and acquaintances of the city and the Clearfield Hospital where I spent one year. Words are but too incapable to voice my appreciation of what was done for me by several friends during my short stay in their city. I must express very frankly that I was received by them with the utmost hospitality and generosity. I can assure them that their friendship and kindness will never be erased from my memory.

Yours very truly

MANUAL TRAINING EXHIBIT IS WELL WORTH A VISIT TO THE HIGH SCHOOL

The exhibit of the manual training department of the Clearfield High School which is on display in the basement on the east side of the High School building today and tomorrow is certainly well worth a visit.

The Progress representative drifted over that way this morning and after looking the exhibit and the manual training department over we were convinced that not only does Prof. W. I. Tawes know his business but that he possesses the happy faculty of being able to interest his pupils in their work.

Heretofore, or in years gone by our manual training instruction appeared to be all along the line of teaching the High School boy to put together the materials prepared and provided for the article to be manufactured or built. Things are different nowadays as Prof. Tawes after giving out his lesson requires the boy artisan to prepare his own plan or blue print of the article to be constructed. Many very creditable plans are on exhibition in the first room entered by the visitor to the exhibit.

The finished objects or articles are found in the second room plentifully displayed about the walls, on tables and on the floor of the room. Each article displayed tells its own story, in that it denotes to the practised eye the character or individuality of the boy who made it.

The work room occupies bright, roomy quarters at the south end of the basement and is fitted up with a full complement of machinery and tools. There are lot of good things we could tell you about this department, which is planning and developing a wealth of worth while ideas in minds of Clearfield's youth, but we're not going to do it at this time, and will close by simply asking you to drop in and look it over and see for yourself what is being accomplished.

NEAR HALF MILLION TREES PLANTED IN COUNTY THIS YEAR

Harrisburg, Pa., May 31.—Figures compiled by the State Department of Forestry show that this spring 41 owners of forest land set out a total of 434,200 forest trees in Clearfield County. More trees would have been planted but the big demand for planting stock exhausted all the available nursery supply early in the spring. Orders were placed for a total of more than seven million trees. Reports indicate that most of the planted trees are growing well, and in time will produce excellent lumber.

The nurseries operated by the State Department of Forestry shipped out more than three and one half million trees this spring, the largest number ever sent out in a single planting season. This spring for the first time, forest trees were planted in every county in the State. This year's nursery out put is fifty times greater than the total shipments ten years ago. The three and one half million planted trees will reforest more than 3,500 acres of idle forest land and when grown up should produce 265,000 cords of wood.

FIREMEN FORM VOLLEY BALL LEAGUE

At a meeting of representatives of the hose companies held in No. 1 Fire House last evening, a volley ball league was formed as one of the recreational activities in the program of Clearfield Community Service. J. K. Potter was chosen chairman, and Messrs. Hobart White, R. L. Whitehill and P. J. Raymond the committee in charge of the games. A schedule will be played at Reedsville on June 7th.

Considerable enthusiasm has been aroused by Mr. Melvin Sheppard during his assignment in Clearfield by National Community Service, and it is believed that this league among the hose companies will be followed by others.

Equipment for volley ball has been ordered for each of the four play grounds and will be available for evening play by the young men and women of the neighborhoods.

The baseball game in the Community Service Sunday School Base Ball League between the Intermediate teams of the Lutherans and Presbyterians will be played at 5:30 tomorrow, Friday afternoon, instead of Saturday, as previously announced.

EAST END RESIDENT DIES

Daniel Griffin, a respected resident of Clearfield for many years, died at his home in Fourth Ward yesterday. The deceased had been a sufferer from cancer of the stomach for the past two years.

Daniel Griffin was an industrious, right living man and was well thought of by all who knew him. He was 65 years old and is survived by the following children: Anna, Thomas Nellie and R. J. Griffin, all of Rochester, N. Y., John of Jersey Shore; Kathryn, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Thomas T. Beahan, of Clearfield.

He was a lifelong member of the Catholic church and his funeral will be held from St. Francis church Saturday morning at 9 o'clock. Interment in Calvary cemetery.

HEARING BEGINS ON ALLEGED DEFICITS IN THE STATE TREASURY

Kephart's Attorney In Opening Speech Denies Authority Of Auditor General Lewis To Act.

MOVE OVERRULED

Harrisburg, Pa., June 1.—William A. Glasgow, Jr., attorney for former State Treasurer Kephart, today questioned Auditor General Lewis' authority in calling the first public hearing in the Treasury investigation. Glasgow said that he and Kephart did not want to hamper investigation, but wanted proper limitations set. He also said the Statute of 1918 did not contemplate bringing the State Treasurer into a public hearing such as is being conducted by Auditor General Lewis. Glasgow argued from the statutes that the scope of this inquiry must be limited to an attempt to ascertain if Mr. Kephart owes the State money, it can have nothing to do with the method of keeping his accounts. He declared that the auditors' accounting should be completed before an explanation was demanded. Edward J. Fox argued that the Auditor General has ample power under the Act of 1911 to hold the hearings and the objections of attorney Glasgow were overruled. The hearing opened at 10:07 A. M. Auditor General Lewis and Attorney General Alter sat together at the desk as joint presiding officers. The first few minutes were occupied with identification of photostatic copies of Treasury and bank records.

Uncommon Sense

MARRY "FOR KEEPS"

IF YOU have a capital of a thousand dollars, and only a thousand dollars, you are likely to be a little particular about investing it.

Yet you invest your capital of happiness, which is all you have, and all you ever will have, on the first pretty face you happen to see.

The average youth devotes more care to the selection of a suit of clothes than he does to the selection of a wife.

When his marriage turns out unhappily, he wonders why he happened to have had luck, or cynically observes that you never can trust a woman.

About 90 per cent of the labor and expense of the divorce courts could be avoided if young men and women would expend a little serious thought about the most serious business of their lives, which is getting married.

Neither men nor women can so skillfully disguise their true natures as to deceive anybody who is really in earnest about investing his capital of happiness where it will pay dividends for all time.

Nobody ever falls so head-over-ears-in-love at first sight that he hasn't time to think over the seriousness of picking a wife before he sends for the best man and engages the minister.

There is no source of unhappiness in the world so prolific as marriage, chiefly because nobody ever appears to think that it should be entered in any way save by accident.

If the reformers who cry out against divorce, when it is too late, would spend the same amount of time and energy trying to teach people to find the right kind of mates, there would be less divorce, less scandal and more room in the newspapers for instructive news.

You can't tell a man anything he doesn't know about the mistake of an unhappy marriage if he already has made the mistake. You can tell him a good deal about it beforehand.

Some day preachers and editors and educators will organize instruction in matrimony; parents will devote a little time to talking to children about it, and as a result there will be about 50 per cent more happiness in the world.

YOUR HAND

How to Read Your Characteristics and Tendencies—The Capabilities or Weaknesses That Make for Success or Failure as Shown in Your Palm

THE HAND OF A MUSICIAN

IN THE hand of a person who is talented in music, the skin is very smooth and soft. This indicates a refined, sensitive nature, with a great dislike for anything that is coarse or unrefined. As a musician, of either sex, must pay attention to details, the fingers must be long in proportion to the rest of the hand.

In the hands of many musicians, the thumb, at its outer angle or joint, is quite pointed. This is held to show a good idea of time or rhythm. A sense of time is sometimes seen in a point or protrusion on the outside of the thumb, below the joint.

The mount of Venus should be fairly strong and high, to show melody, and this characteristic is seen also in a good mount of Saturn at the base of the middle finger. When there are a good mount of Apollo at the base of the third or ring finger, and a good mount of the moon near the wrist, a decided sense of harmony is shown.

WHY?

IS THERE SAND AT THE SEASHORE

THE presence of the sand which makes beaches and drifts into dunes along the edge of the sea dates back originally to the formation of the earth itself. At this time, millions of years ago, the land and rocks which now form what we know as "the crust of the earth," was a molten mass, in which was a large proportion of the element known to science as "silicon." This silicon was burned and, in conjunction with the oxygen which surrounded everything, produced the substance known as "silica" or "burned silicon." A large portion of this was deposited on the surface of the earth and, when the world cooled, it formed a sort of crust or granular deposit, to which the name of "sandstone" has been applied.

When the oceans were formed, the action of the water in constantly wearing away this sandstone broke it up into tiny particles and formed the sand as we see it today. The reason that this appears in large quantities on the edge of the ocean is because the motion of the waves and the tides constantly swept it up from the bed of the sea and deposited it on the beaches, where it remains silently to testify to events which happened long before the memory of man.

HORSE SHOE PITCHERS WILL GET CHESTY

The entire West Side is taking to horse shoe pitching like a duck to water and the rattle of steel against steel is heard throughout that region. The latest organized bid for fame as cricketers of the iron peg is the West Sixth Avenue team. It is captained by Doris Lytle, who has with him Luther Hubler, Bill Adams, Ralph Dunlap, Alex Hughets, and Willard Ogden.

They are new at the game but very chesty and say they can not only "Ring the hub" but they can "pitch rings around" any other team in that section.

In that connection and while we are talking on horse shoe pitching, it might be well to briefly mention the experience of a couple of Turnpike Avenue "horse shoe sharks." They felt just like those West Sixth Avenue fellows and decided to trim a couple of Nichols street cricks. They started it alright, but Nichols street finished it as strong as limburger cheese. The Turnpike Avenue team was composed of Paul Gilbert and Raymond Boyce. The experts they proposed humiliating were Shipley and Peters. Here's the score for the three games:

How to Make and Use It

By A. HYATT VERRILL

II. PRINCIPLES OF WIRELESS TRANSMISSION

Before attempting to explain the functions and the principles of the radio telephones, or describing how to make, use and operate them, it is necessary to understand something of the underlying principles and fundamental laws of wireless transmission.

It is not, however, necessary to enter into a long discussion on the theories and principles of electricity or physics which enter into the subject, but merely to illustrate and make clear a few important and salient laws, causes and results which make the transmission of sounds possible without the use of wires between the sending and receiving instruments.

The first and most important principle of all radio transmission is the fact that all our atmosphere is constantly disturbed by vibrations or oscillations or, as we may call them for the sake of simplicity, waves. We are accustomed to think of the atmosphere about us as a more or less uniform substance which we call air, but in reality the air or atmosphere, space, and in fact all solids as well as liquids are pervaded by an invisible, odorless, and almost weightless but exceedingly elastic substance known as ether or luminiferous ether. It is by means of this ether that all heat, light, electricity, etc., are transmitted, in the form of waves or vibrations. Light and heat waves have been known to science for a long time, but it is only within comparatively recent years that man has learned that electric or electro-magnetic waves also travel through the ether, and it was through this discovery, and by means of these waves, that wireless telegraphy and telephony became possible. In a way, the electro-magnetic waves are very similar to the waves or ripples, formed by dropping a stone in a calm pool of water, for, just as the water waves travel in gradually widening circles from the splash, so the electric waves, started by the spark of a wireless transmitting or sending instrument, spread in ever-widening circles through the ether. Moreover, just as the waves in the pool are short and clear near the spot where the stone is thrown and gradually become longer and less noticeable and farther apart as they flow from the splash, so wireless waves are clearer and sharper near the instrument and decrease in clearness and size as they get farther and farther away and, to draw still another comparison, just as the shore of the pool or any object in the water interrupts or breaks the waves, so a wireless receiving instrument will interrupt or receive the electrical waves of the ether. Indeed, just as the waves or vibrations set up by the wireless spark are electro-magnetic waves and the energy that starts them is electrical energy, so the waves in the pool are started by muscular or mechanical energy. You can readily understand how it would be possible to communicate by means of such liquid waves, for, if a person at a distance should toss stones into the water at stated intervals, a person watching the shore, and noticing the intervals of the waves, could understand signals which had been prearranged. This, of course, would be a very crude and uncertain method of communication; but if you could devise some instrument to count and measure the waves and could devise means for creating waves of definite sizes and numbers, a practical means of communication could be established. It is just this which occurs in the transmission and reception of electro-magnetic or wireless waves, for, by breaking or interrupting the waves sent out by the spark they are transformed into long and short sections which correspond to dots and dashes as used in wireless telegraphy. These waves, set in motion by the sending apparatus, possess the property of starting oscillations in any conductor which they strike, and if they strike the aerial or antenna of a wireless station they start oscillations in the wires, but so faint and weak that they would not be detected unless sensitive instruments were provided to magnify and catch them. Such instruments are known as detectors and consist of various substances or devices which are adjustable and from which wires lead to a telephone receiver. The high frequency oscillations of the ether, which are known as alternating currents, as they flow back and forth, are cut off by the magnets in the receiver, while the detector is designed to allow the oscillations to pass through in one direction, but will not allow a return, and thus it acts as a check-valve in a water pipe and the alternating, back-and-forth currents are transformed into impulses going in one direction only and known as direct currents. These will flow through a telephone receiver and cause the diaphragm to vibrate, and thus the ear detects the interrupted buzzing sounds which indicate the dots and dashes of the code. Another very important part of the mechanism of the wireless apparatus is the tuner, for without this the various vibrations of the ether sent out from numberless stations would come as a hodge-podge of meaningless sounds to the receiver. But by arranging the receiving instrument so it may be adjusted to receive or pick up only those waves of a certain length, all other vibrations, and the messages they carry are eliminated or cut out. So, the wireless operator who is receiving messages, may adjust his instrument back and forth until he picks up any message which may be passing through the ether at the time.

AND THINGS

By J. D. C.

Vintondale should petition the State Department for recognition as a country or government the same as Mexico is doing. The United States appears to have great need of a representative at Vintondale to look after the rights of her American citizens, as that town is governed by its own constitution and own laws and any person the thugs guarding the town don't want there is clubbed right out of the place. This, too, in free America and right here in old Pennsylvania, where hangs the bell which once upon a time proclaimed liberty to all the world.

The United States Army stand fourteenth in the list of armies of the world in actual numerical strength. And twenty-fifth of the size of the army is compared to the total population of the country. Russia is first with an army of 1,370,000 men. China is second with 1,083,000 and France third with 818,000. Other armies in order, are:

Abyssinia, 471,000; Greece, 310,000; Japan, 302,000; Poland, 200,000; Italy, 250,000; Great Britain, 237,000; India, 221,000; Spain, 216,000; Turkey, 188,000; Roumania, 186,000; and the United States, 158,000.

What is the matter with these lawyers of ours who happen to be a chain of fortunate circumstances to get catapulted into the high office of Attorney General of the United States. We thought the limit was reached when A. Misfit Palmer was dropped overboard but the job appears to be destined for "birds of a feather" lately regardless of party label. The present "encumbrance," like his unlamented predecessor, is now charged among many other things with turning over to "Swiss" claimants of 34,000 shares in the American Metal Company by the present Alien Property Custodian on the order of Attorney General Daugherty. The property now represented by seven million dollars worth of Liberty Bonds, was taken from a German owned corporation during the war. Before the property could be returned it was necessary to show that a non-enemy owned it and this was done to the satisfaction of Daugherty regardless of the previous declaration of the real owners when it was seized. The law says such return or property right could not be established except by public hearing, but none was held and the "Swiss claimants" were given the millions by Daugherty's unsupported order.

New York Courts re convicting criminals so rapidly that Sing Sing prison, with a capacity of 1200, now contains 1216 prisoners.

Prohibition Commissioner Haynes says no less than thirty-one dry enforcement officers were killed by bootleggers last year. "The use of firearms to overtake fugitive rum runners, whether in vehicles or on foot, is countenanced only in extreme circumstances, when there is good reason to believe contraband liquor is involved."

HAY SHIPPERS FREQUENTLY MEET
WITH LOSS IN EARLY SHIPMENTS

Tight Baling and Close Packing of Hay Cause Heating.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Every year when new hay begins to be marketed, reports from several central western hay markets show that much of the new hay arriving is hot and out of condition, and must be sold at a heavy discount under the price quoted for No. 1 hay. There are a number of causes, but the bureau of markets and crop estimates of the United States Department of Agriculture believes the principal one is that the hay is baled and shipped before it has cured sufficiently and while it contains too much moisture.

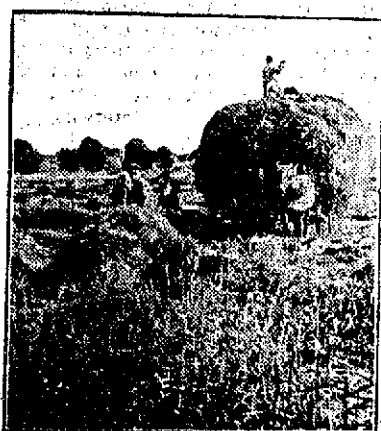

Baling Newly Cut Hay Is Risky.

It is the custom in some sections to bale the hay from the windrow or cock in order to avoid the expense of stacking or putting in the barn. It is almost always true that the first new hay shipped to the various markets is baled in this way. In most of the timothy-producing sections weather conditions are such that it is not safe to allow the hay to remain long in either the windrow or cock, if the best quality of hay is to be obtained. Local showers or heavy dews, followed by a hot sun, will soon cause it to bleach and deteriorate. It is, therefore, the practice to bale just as soon as, in the judgment of the producer or shipper, the hay can be safely shipped. This is frequently entirely too soon for the conditions under which it is marketed.

The movement of hay from a dry to a humid section, or from a cool to a warmer one, increases the probability of heating. Tight baling and close packing in the cars are contributing causes, and apply to alfalfa and prairie hay as well as to timothy. Higher prices invite early shipment. The easiest way to avoid the losses caused by hay getting out of condition is to ship new hay until it has gone through the "sweat" and becomes properly cured in the mow or stack. The premiums usually offered for early shipments of new hay are very inviting, however. The first new hay, if in good condition, often sells near the price of old hay which, as the season draws to a close, is frequently high. The new hay is heavier, too, and the shipper profits from the sale of the water in it, even though it sells below the price of old hay. The chance of getting these premiums causes many shippers to take the risk of the losses that continually occur. It is very doubtful, however, if the premiums equal the losses during the first week or two of the movement.

While the shipment of new hay is not advised until it is cured so as to contain not more than 14 or 15 per cent moisture, a few suggestions are offered by the Department of Agriculture, which, if followed, will tend to eliminate

nate some of the losses frequently incurred. The principal ones are:

Press the hay in the bale as loosely as possible to get the minimum weight in the car.

Load hay in cars with air space about the bales; standing the bales on end is considered a good practice.

Ship first hay to near-by markets only.

Hay shipped into low or humid territories should be drier than when shipped into dry or high sections.

Provide ventilation for cars when possible.

Bill cars so that no delay will occur in handling or unloading at destination.

Some persons think that the use of hog cholera serum has become so general that we are far on the way toward the elimination of the disease, but, according to the United States Department of Agriculture, a claimant of cholera can not be expected through the use of this method. Besides, only a small percentage of the hogs in the country are treated each year and there is also almost a complete turnover of the swine population each year. Every 12 months we start with a new lot of pigs and the fight against disease must start at the beginning again.

About 500,000,000 cubic centimeters of serum are used every year, which means that, counting 50 cubic centimeters for each hog, only about 10,000,000 hogs are treated. In recent years there have been around 70,000,000 hogs in the country on January 1, according to federal crop estimates, which means many more hogs in the spring and summer. If all these hogs were treated, cholera would not be eliminated. It would simply be made impotent to kill many hogs for one season and would begin to kill again the next season if serum were not used. Serum treatment, like insurance, can not be allowed to lapse.

PUREBRED SURELY PAID WELL

Lambs From Registered Sire Brought More Money Than Those From Scrub in Missouri.

In the sheep flock the purebred sire is a money maker. In one experiment at the Missouri College of Agriculture the lambs from a purebred ram brought 63 per cent more money than lambs of the same age fed in the same way but sired by a scrub. The lambs from the purebred ram weighed more at three months of age than the lambs sired by the inferior ram at four months of age.

Dressing Asparagus Bed. Give the asparagus bed a good dressing of manure. It will hasten the appearance of the "grass" and make it more tender. The custom of salting the bed may be omitted. It does not produce any noticeable results one way or the other.

SWAM MEUSE UNDER FIRE

Sergt. M. Waldo Hatter of Joplin, Mo., Wears Medals for World War Bravery.

In the fighting in France Sergt. M. Waldo Hatter of Joplin, Mo., swam the Meuse river under fire after a comrade had perished in the attempt, landed within the German lines and explored their positions thoroughly and swam back across the river with information of great value to the American command. For this he has received the croce di guerra of Italy, the equivalent of the French croix de guerre.

Hatter met Gen. Armando Diaz, commander in chief of the Italian armies in the World war, at the third national convention of the American Legion in Kansas City. After this meeting the Italian decoration was presented at a special ceremony in Joplin. The Missourian also wears the American Medal of Honor and the French croix de guerre.

"SPRINGTIME"—A MUSICAL COMEDY TO

BE GIVEN HERE ABOUT JUNE 22nd

Arrangements have been completed by a committee of the Junior Women's Club, headed by Helen O'Brien, for the production of "Springtime," a musical comedy De Luxe, under the direction of John B. Rogers Producing Company, at the Driggs Theatre here sometime about June 22nd or 23rd.

Members of the cast and choruses will be selected from the best talent in Clearfield. The production promises to be of exceptional merit, as the talent in Clearfield is of better quality than the usual amateur calibre. The scenery and costumes as furnished by the producer are said to be the last word in splendor and beauty. A professional director will be sent here to take charge of the staging of the entertainment.

Rehearsals, it is said, will begin about June 6th.

Two Months Could Not Turn in Bed. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Finally Restored Health.

Seattle, Washington.—"I had dragging pains first and could not stand on my feet, then I had chills and fever and such pains in my right side and a hard lump there. I could not turn myself in bed and could not sleep. I was this way for over two months, trying everything any one told me, until my sister brought me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it regularly until all the hard pains had left me and I was able to be up and to do my work again. The hard lump left my side and I feel splendid in all ways. I know of many women it has helped."—Mrs. G. Richardson, 4640 Orcus St., Seattle, Washington.

This is another case where Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brought results after trying everything any one told me had failed.

If you are suffering from pain, nervousness and are always tired, if you are low spirited and good for nothing, take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. You may not only relieve the present distress, but prevent the development of more serious trouble.

Entered in Post Office at Clearfield, Pa., as second class mail matter.

Some time ago a group of upper classmen of Columbia University invaded little old New York and started to paint a portion of the old town red. These college boys might well have kept mum about being from Columbia. The university itself and its officers had nothing to do with the boys while they were off the college campus, had no control over them and were not responsible for whatever they might have done. The boys, however, were full of the college spirit. They gave their yells and their war dances. Immediately those who saw them charged Columbia University with laxity and there was a general condemnation of colleges for permitting such hoodlum actions by its students. The college was not at fault. Every son's father knew his boy was away from the restraining influence of the college, a law unto himself. But what he did not know was what the aforesaid son was doing. But why all this about Columbia? What does it have to do with us here in Clearfield? Just this:

The classes in our high school and grade schools are winding up their school year. They have been studying in classes as units. Naturally their relaxation and recreation will be in class units. Their social affairs take on a similar complexion. So long as these functions are held in the school buildings and on the school grounds there will be proper chaperonage and direction of youthful impulses. When a class or a group of students leave the school property, whether they hold their function as a class or not, they are in no manner subject to the rules of the school and parents will do well to keep this in mind.

It is absurd to say that Harding, having appointed Daugherty, will ask for his resignation. Neither will any party leader suggest that Daugherty resign.

To compare the hullabaloo about Daugherty and Morse with the Ballinger case is ridiculous. The Ballinger case involved a great national question of change in the country's policy about conserving its natural resources, on which question great groups of people felt strongly.

All this about Daugherty and Morse is of the past. It has been an issue in nearly every political campaign in Ohio ten years, and Daugherty always has admitted it, justified it, and presented letters from William Howard Taft and James H. Wickersham, backing up his justification.

The only new things are the actual letters in the case, and they don't present any new fact except that Morse never paid the fee he promised to pay for the service rendered.

If anybody supposes that the reading of these letters into the Congressional Record by an opposition Senator was a pious act of disinterested public service, he must be guileless. That action had exactly the same sort of political motive as that which was in the mind of the Republican Senator who answered by naming and impugning some members of Woodrow Wilson's political and personal family.

The more important Democratic leaders aren't taking part in the revival of the Morse case, although they are willing to let some minor ones do it, on the theory that it is no worse than the kind of politics the Republicans used to play against the Wilson administration.

The old Morse case has nothing to do with Daugherty's conduct of his present office. Not even the most violent of his enemies suggests that. It is true that Morse now is being prosecuted for a new offense, but everybody knows this new Morse case was initiated and is being pushed by a wholly separate department of the government, the shipping board, whose lawyers are not under Daugherty's control.

Daugherty's connection with the Morse pardon ten years ago was brought up at the time Harding was about to appoint Daugherty as attorney general. It was said, against Daugherty's appointment, that if he were attorney general this old case would be sure to be brought up by some political opponent or by some litigant interest in discrediting the department of justice. The present situation justifies this prediction.

Daugherty's conduct of his office has disarmed many of his critics, and some very dependable persons who in the beginning opposed his appointment will stand by him now with firm conviction. The way Daugherty has kept his office free from politics and has stood off the Republican Senators and Congressmen who wanted federal judgeships and other offices for their friends has amazed and delighted those who thought Daugherty's availability for the office of attorney general was impaired by the fact that he was too much of a politician and too close to the actual management of Harding's campaign and the obligations that arise out of every campaign.

GROWING RADISH IS EASY MATTER

Garden Does Not Seem Complete
Without Short Row or Patch
of Vegetables.

RICH SOIL MOST IMPORTANT

Almost Any Variety Is Good, Main
Difference Being in Type of Root
—It Is Cool Weather Plant
and Grows Quickly.

The radish is practically a universal vegetable. It is now in the market the year around and rarely is there a garden planted without at least a short row or small patch broadcast to these pungent appetizers of the garden. There isn't a great difference in the various kinds of radish offered for sale by the seedsmen and almost any of them will be successful. The main difference is in the type of root.

Stick a pencil blindly on almost any of them and order the one spiked and you will have good radishes if the garden conditions are suitable for growing good radishes at all.

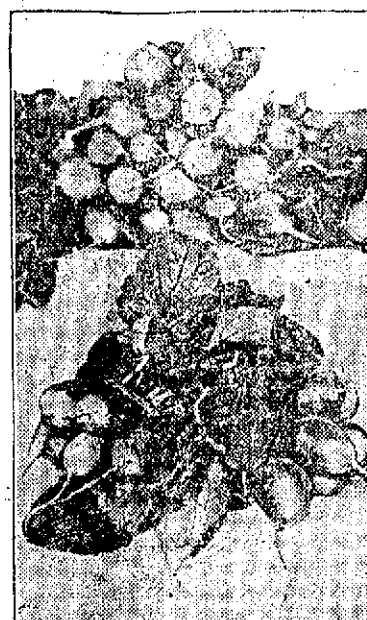

In the South the radish can be grown outdoors almost all winter except in the colder sections, plantings being made every ten days or two weeks for succession. In the North it is the first vegetable to go into the ground in the spring. In fact, it should be planted as soon as the soil can be worked, as it is quite hardy and won't be hurt by a little frost.

It is a cool weather plant and must be grown steadily and quickly. Hot weather or a dry spell, either giving a check in growth, result in hollow, pithy roots, which are quite worthless. Cool and fairly moist conditions make the crisp, solid, toothsome radishes that everyone relishes in the early days of spring.

Of the white radishes, Icicle has attained great popularity and is a fine radish. It is excellent in the summer when other types are not at their best. In case of doubt, French Breakfast in the olive shade, Scarlet Globe in the round, and some of the 20-day specialties can be recommended. Any of the long scarlet types give a the same result, the improvement in the newer varieties being in regularity and uniformity of growth.

Radish soil must be rich and fine and deeply worked. It is best to have the manure dug in during the fall or if this has not been done it should be well rotted and well incorporated with the soil in the spring. Radishes will grow almost anywhere if the soil is rich and in almost any sort of soil except clay. Clay soil needs to be lightened with ashes or sand and copious dressings of manure spaded into it. Radishes are to do their best in it. Radishes may be sown broadcast provided the seed is not scattered too thickly or in rows as close together as six inches.

Clean Up Rubbish.
Clean up last year's garden if this was not attended to in the fall. All remnants of vegetables and flowers must be gathered together and burned. This will destroy the eggs of innumerable insects. Weeds should likewise be destroyed, but do not yet destroy mulches, which have been placed over hardy plants and around shrubs. If you have not already sprinkled limestone over your garden area, this is a good time to do it so that the spring freezing and thawing and the early rains may help to disintegrate and carry the lime water into the soil to sweeten it. Lime is especially beneficial to grapes.

HOW TO KEEP YOUR BABY WELL

A Weekly Talk to Mothers Issued
Through The Babies' Prophylactic
Clinic, Henry Phipps Institute, 7th
and Lombard Streets, Philadelphia.

Clothing the Baby

Dress the baby carefully, turning him as little as possible. The mother soon learns the quickest and best way. It tires baby when dressing takes so long.

Clothing must be suited to the weather and to the age and condition of the child. Young babies and those who are weakly need warm clothing, as they are easily chilled. Robust babies quickly get used to the changes in the weather, and are often too warmly dressed, especially when they are older and start to run about.

If the baby's hands and feet are cold or he looks pinched and blue about the lips, he needs warmer clothing. If he perspires and his body is moist to the touch, he has too much on. Overdressed babies are likely to be restless and fretful. In hot weather, the clothes should be light; in cold weather much heavier and warmer clothes are needed. Most doctors believe that shirts, bands, stocking for the baby should have some wool in them. If necessary they may be of the lightest weight, and in the hottest weather only the band, diaper and slip need be worn.

All baby's clothing should be simple. Dresses and shirts may be 26 inches long, the extra length being used to cover the baby's feet. Many mothers rather have baby's dresses short from the start. This saves both time and money.

The following list gives the clothing a new born baby needs:

Diapers, dozen, 4 to 6.
Knitted Bands, Number 2.
Knitted shirts, Number 2 to 4.
Flannel Petticoats, Number 2 to 4.
Night Gowns, 3.
White cotton slips, Number 4 to 8.
Coats and Capes.
Long Booties or Stockings, pairs 2 to 4.

Sasques, Number 3.
Wraps or blankets, Number 3.
How to make and take care of these things will be discussed in the next few talks.

When dressing or undressing the baby place him on the table described in the talk on Baby's Bath and draw the clothing over his feet rather than over his head. Never use starch in washing a baby's clothes as it makes them stiff and rubs and chafes the skin.

The important things to remember about a baby's clothing are that they should fit the body, be loose enough to give the baby free use of his arms and legs, and still be tight enough to be comfortable.

CURWENSVILLE

The Commencement Exercises of the High School, Class of 1922, passed off most delightfully last evening at the Opera House. The program as published in Monday's issue was carried out in detail except that on account of the continued illness of Supt. W. P. Trostle, Dr. H. O. King, President of the Board of Education presented the Diplomas. The class composed of twenty-five members is the largest since 1917 which graduated the same number. The oration on "Patriotism" by Miss Cora Wolf carrying with it Salutory and by Miss Frances Cook on "Education Preparedness" carrying the Valedictory were well written and well rendered. The prize for excellence in history, given by the Susquehanna Chapter of the D. A. R. was awarded to Mr. Reuben Moore. The Honor medal, given by the Joshua Earl Sipes Post No. 505 American Legion was awarded to Mr. Harold Starr, Class of 1923.

Supt. H. J. Barrett was introduced by Prof. Norris and the ovation which he received bespoke the place he holds in the hearts of the people of Curwensville. After a few words of greeting Mr. Barrett took up his theme "How Shall I Do It?" During his entire discourse he held the closest attention of his audience. Space forbids a detailed account of his address. His advice and counsel to the graduates ought to sink deep into their hearts. He urged the necessity of four salient features in life if they hoped to be able to cope with the world and successfully meet the crisis which must necessarily be met. These four are briefly "Proper Habits", "Usable Knowledge", "High Ideal" and "Proper Attitude". These he clinched by timely illustrations which could not help but drive them home into the minds and hearts of all the young folks who heard him.

At the close of the Commencement exercises the Alumni Banquet was held at the Park Hotel, detailed account of which will be given in a later issue.

MARY MARIE

By Eleanor H. Porter

Illustrations by
R. H. Livingstone

I Went Into the Library. Father Stood With His Back to the Fireplace and His Hands in His Pockets.

"Then you did refuse?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, you may go and tell her now, please, that you are sorry, and that you will go to school this afternoon. You may go now." And he turned to the table and picked up his book. I didn't go, of course. I just stood there twisting my handkerchief in my fingers; and, of course, right away he saw me. He had sat down then.

"Mary, didn't you hear me?" he demanded.

"Yes, sir, but—Father, I can't go back to that school," I choked. And I began to cry.

"But I tell you that you must."

"I shook my head."

"Do you mean that you defy me as you did your Aunt Jane this morning?" he asked, looking at me.

"Yes, sir."

For a minute he sat and stared at me just as Aunt Jane had done; then he lifted his hand and threw back his shoulders as if he was throwing off a heavy weight.

"Come, come, Mary," he said sternly. "I am not a patient man, and my temper has reached the breaking point. You will go back to school and you will go now. I mean that, Mary."

"But, Father, I can't," I choked; and I guess there was something in my face this time that made even him see. For again he just stared for a minute, and then said:

"Mary, what in the world does this mean? Why can't you go back? Have you been expelled?"

"Oh, no, sir."

"Then you mean you won't go back?"

"I mean I can't—on account of Mother."

I wouldn't have said it if I hadn't had to. I didn't want to tell him, but I knew from the very first that I'd have to tell him before I got through. I could see it in his face. And so, now, with his eyes blazing as he jumped almost out of his chair and exclaimed:

"Your mother? What?"

"Your mother? What?"

"I mean, on account of Mother—that not for you, or Aunt Jane, or anybody will I go back to that school and associate with folks that won't associate with me—on account of Mother."

And then I told it—all about the girls, Stella Mayhew, Carrie, and how they acted, and what they said about my being Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde because I was a Mary and a Marie, and the ice-cream, and the parties they had to give up if they went with me. And I know I was crying so I could hardly speak, before I finished, and Father was on his feet tramping up and down the room muttering something under his breath, and looking—oh, I can't begin to tell how he looked. But it was awful.

"And so that's why I wish," I finished chokingly, "that it would hurry up and be a year, so Mother could get married."

"Married?" Like a flash he turned and stopped short, staring at me.

"What?" he exclaimed; "for if she did get married, she wouldn't be divorced any longer, would she?"

But he wouldn't answer. With a queer little noise in his throat he turned again and began to walk up and down, up and down until I thought for a minute he'd forgotten I was there. But he hadn't. For after a while he stopped again right in front of me.

"So your mother is thinking of getting married," he said in a voice so queer it sounded as if it had come from away off somewhere.

But I shook my head and said no, of course; and that I was very sure she wouldn't till her year was up, and even then I didn't know which she'd take, so I couldn't tell for sure anything about it. But I hoped she'd take one of them, so she wouldn't be divorced any longer.

Father turned, and began to walk up and down again, with his hands in his pockets; and I didn't know whether to go away or to stay, and I suppose I'd have been there now if Aunt Jane hadn't suddenly appeared in the library doorway.

"Charles, if Mary is going to school at all today, it is high time she was starting," she said. But Father didn't seem to hear. He was still tramping up and down the room, his hands in his pockets.

"Charles!" Aunt Jane raised her voice and spoke again. "I said if Mary is going to school at all today it is high time she was starting."

"Eh? What?" If you'll believe it, that man looked as dazed as if he'd never even heard of my going to school. Then suddenly his face changed. "Oh, yes, to be sure. Well, er—Mary is not going to school today," he said. Then he looked at his watch, and without another word strode into the hall, got his hat, and left the house, leaving Aunt Jane and me staring into each other's faces.

But I didn't stay much longer than Father did. I strode in to the hall, too, by Aunt Jane. But I didn't leave the house. I came up here to my own room; and ever since I've been writing it all down in my book.

Of course, I don't know now what's going to happen next. But I wish you could have seen Aunt Jane's face when Father said I wasn't going to school today! I don't believe she's sure yet that she heard right—though she didn't try to stop me, or even speak when I left and came upstairs. I think I just know she's keeping up a powerful thinking.

For that matter, so am I. What is going to happen next? I haven't got to go to school tomorrow? But then, of course, I shan't do that. Besides, I don't believe Father'll ask me to, after what I said about Mother. He didn't like that—what those girls said—any better than I did. I'm sure of that. Why, he looked simply furious. But then, isn't any other school here that I can be sent to, and—

But what's the use? I might surmise, and speculate all day and not come anywhere near the truth. I must await—what the night will bring forth, as they say in really true novels.

FOUR DAYS LATER

And what did the night bring forth? Yes, what did it bring! Verily it brought forth one thing I thought nothing ever could have brought forth.

It was like this.

That night at the supper table Aunt Jane cleared her throat in the lamplight and I will speak kind of a way that she always uses when she speaks to Father. (Aunt Jane doesn't talk to Father much more than Mother used to.)

"Charles," she began.

Father had an astronomy paper beside his plate, and he was so busy reading he didn't hear, so Aunt Jane had to speak again—a little louder this time.

"Charles, I have something to say to you."

"Eh? What? Oh—er—yes. Well, Jane, what is it?" Father was looking up with his I'll-be-patient-if-it-kills-me air, and with his forefinger down on his paper to keep his place.

As if anybody could talk to a person who's simply tolerating you for a minute like that, with his forefinger holding on to what he wants to tend to! Why, I actually found myself being sorry for Aunt Jane.

She cleared her throat again.

"It is understood, of course, that Mary is to go to school tomorrow morning, I suppose," she said.

"Why, of course, of course," began Father impatiently, looking down at his paper. "Of course she'll go to—" he stopped suddenly. A complete change came to his face. He grew red, then white. His eyes sort of flashed. "School?" he said then, in a hard, decided voice. "Oh, no; Mary is not going to school tomorrow morning." He looked down to his paper and began to read again. For him the subject was very evidently closed. But for Aunt Jane it was not closed.

"You don't mean, Charles, that she's not to go to school at all, any more," she gasped.

"Exactly." Father read on in his paper without looking up.

Aunt Jane's lips came together hard. "Charles, I'm amazed at you—yielding to that child's whims like this—just she doesn't want to go to school! It's the principle of the thing that I'm objecting to. Do you realize what it will lead to—what it—"

"June!" with a jerk Father sat up straight. "I realize some things that perhaps you do not. But that is neither here nor there. I do not wish Mary to go to school any more this spring. That is all; and I think—it is sufficient."

"Certainly," Aunt Jane's lips came together again grim and hard. "Perhaps you will be good enough to say what she shall do with her time."

"Time? Do? Why—er—what she always does; read, sew, study—"

"Study?" Aunt Jane asked the question with a hateful little smile that Father would have been blind not to have understood. And he was equal to it—but I must tell over backward when I found how equal to it he was.

"Certainly," he says, "study. I'll hear her lessons myself—in the library, after I come home in the afternoon. Now let us hear no more about it."

With that he pushed back his plate and left the table without waiting for dessert. And Aunt Jane and I were left alone.

I didn't say anything. Victors shouldn't boast—and I was a victor, of course, about the school. But when I thought of what Father had said about my reciting my lessons to him every day in the library—I wasn't so sure whether I'd won or not. Recite lessons to my father? Why, I couldn't even imagine such a thing!

Aunt Jane didn't say anything either. I guess she didn't know what to say. And it was kind of a queer situation, when you came right down to it. Both of us sitting there and knowing I wasn't going back to school any more, and I knowing why, and knowing Aunt Jane didn't know why. (Of course I had not told Aunt Jane about Mother and Mrs. Mayhew.) It would be a funny world, wouldn't it, if we all knew what each other was thinking all the time? Why, we'd get so we wouldn't any of us speak to each other. I'm afraid, we'd be so angry at what the other was thinking.

Well, Aunt Jane and I didn't speak that night at the supper table. We finished in stern silence; then Aunt Jane went upstairs to her room and I went up to mine. (You see what a perfectly wildly exciting life Mary is living! And when I think of how full of good times Mother wanted every minute to be. But that was for Marie, of course.)

The next morning after breakfast Aunt Jane said:

"You will spend your forenoon studying, Mary. See that you learn well your lessons, so as not to annoy your father."

"Yes, Aunt Jane," said Mary, polite and proper, and went upstairs obediently; but even Mary didn't know exactly how to study those lessons.

Carrie had brought me all my books from school. I had asked her to when I knew that I was not going back. There were the lessons that had been assigned for the next day, of course, and I supposed probably Father would want me to study those. But I couldn't imagine Father teaching me all alone. I couldn't imagine myself reciting lessons to Father!

But I needn't have worried. If I could only have known. Little did I think—But, there, this is no way to tell a story. I read in a book, "How to Write a Novel," that you mustn't "anticipate." (I thought folks always anticipated novels. I do. I thought you wanted them to.)

Well, to go on.

Father got home at four o'clock. I saw him come up the walk, and I waited till I was sure he'd got settled in the library, then I went down.

He wasn't there.

A minute later I saw him crossing the lawn to the observatory. Well, what to do I didn't know. Mary said to go after him; but Marie said nay, nay. And in spite of being Mary just now, I let Marie have her way.

Elaborate Reed Piece, Gift to MacNider, From the Department of the Philippines.

A chair of woven reeds that will sustain the weight of half a dozen men now ornaments the office of Commander Hanford MacNider of the American Legion, as a gift from the Department of the Philippines. It is modeled on the throne of a Moro chieftain.

Though the chair never felt a painter's brush, it is built up in a bright color scheme that is the gift of the sun itself. Spill bamboo and carefully chosen reeds were selected in the course of the tropical summer for their varying shades. These were assembled at Manila and woven into a great chair without nails, pegs or putty. The workmanship is exquisite and Oriental in design.

POULTRY

TURKEY HEN IS BEST MOTHER

She Knows Wants of Poults and Can Talk to Them in Language They Soon Learn.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

For poults the turkey hen is the best mother that can be found. She knows their needs and can talk to them in a language they soon learn to understand. At the approach of any danger she gives a low, warning note that sends them scurrying in every direction for a weed or patch of green grass where then can lie flat on the ground safely hidden from view. While on free range, she keeps her brood together by talking continuously in a contented, purring tone, so that the poults always know where she is.

When her poults become widely separated, or if some become lost, she hears their "peep, peep," she calls them with the characteristic yelp heard so frequently during the laying season. Now and then, while the poults are but a few days old, she catches a grasshopper or other insect and calls the poults to come and get it. They soon learn to find their own feed, however, and range out ahead of the mother hen in search of whatever they can find.

Young turkeys usually remain with the mother hen until about October or November, when the males ordinarily separate from the females and range by themselves. When two turkey hens with broods of about the same age are turned out on free range together they will remain in one flock, and as this makes it easier to hunt them up and dare for them, it is advisable to turn out two or three hens with their broods together when they are given free range. It is not a good plan to have more than this number of young poults in one flock, say poultry specialists in the United States Department of Agriculture, as they may all try to crowd under one or two hens to be hovered.

GOSLINGS READY TO MARKET

Advisable to Avoid Use of Young Stock in Raising Fowls—Old Birds Are Preferred.

Geese are birds of long life, sometimes living fifteen to twenty years, and ganders are at their best at three, four or five years. The use of immature young stock should be avoided, especially for the renewal of breeding geese, but for the production of early goslings for market, it is often the custom among breeders to use eggs from young geese, as these usually begin to lay earlier than older birds. Such a practice is perfectly proper, but for breeding stock, experienced breeders prefer older or well matured geese and ganders.

Unforgettable.
Man forgets much in this world, but ask any of the old ones if he has forgotten the lessons he learned at mother's and across father's knee.—Hous-ton Post.

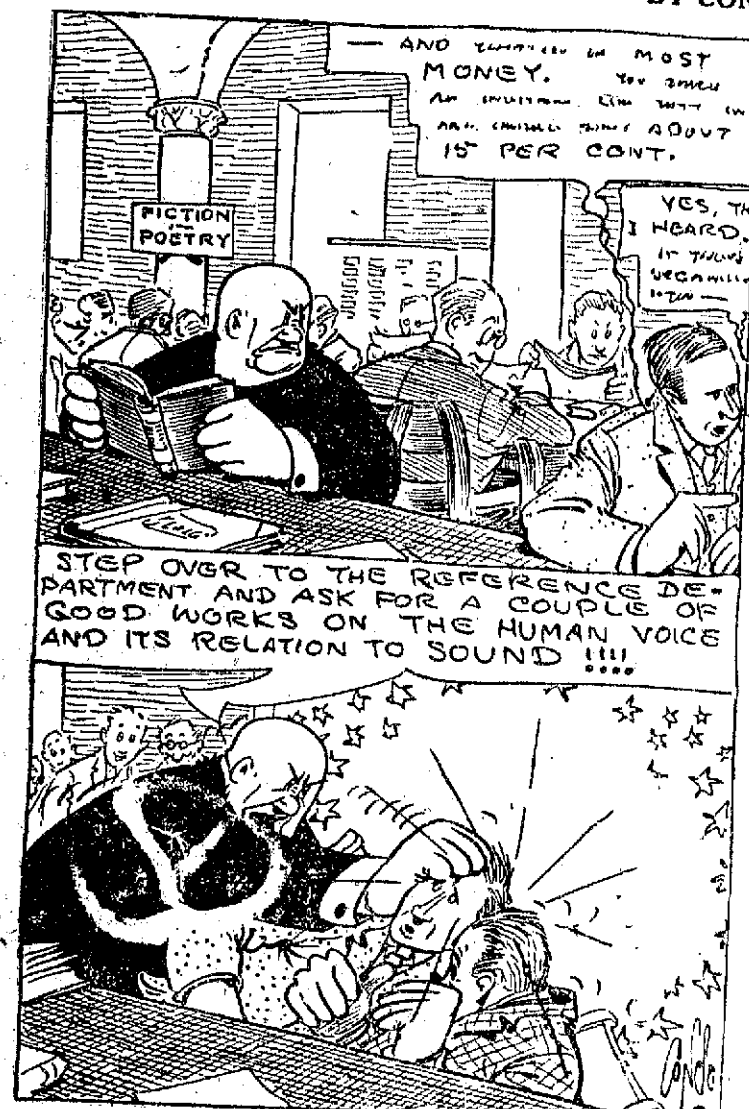

BOWELS PARALYZED—NOW WELL

Suffered Over 20 Years, Yet Nerv-Worth Restored

When a man has suffered for over 20 years with indigestion and constipation until his bowels are in a paralyzed condition and he had tried remedies and doctors without relief he is likely to be quite skeptical of what any other remedy may be able to do for him. That was the state of mind in which Mr. James Hudson of Muskogee, Mich., began the use of Nerv-Worth—yet before he had used up the first bottle, so he tells one of our representatives, he began to feel the beneficial effects. His sour stomach was improved, he had no more gas bloated, did not belch after eating, could sleep well and had regular movements of his bowels without artificial aid. This seems truly remarkable, but there are thousands of people throughout this country who have had a similar experience with Nerv-Worth and it is for that reason that we authorize every druggist to give the purchase money back if the first bottle fails to show satisfactory and encouraging results, nearly every druggist has it at one dollar a bottle. You can always find it on sale at the Stewart Drug Store in this city. If you suffer from any form of stomach or bowel ailment you should give it a trial at once. It is especially fine for delicate women and sickly children and its taste is very pleasant.

Defends the Negro.
His appointment of a negro boy to Annapolis naval academy is defended by Representative Martin Anson of New York as a matter of justice to the large colored population of his district, and "in recognition of the valor and patriotism of the 500,000 colored boys in the United States service in the World war." The appointee, Eudie Treville Holley, is a freshman in the College of the City of New York. Harvard university makes no discrimination against negroes, and there are several all-negro posts in the American Legion.

Carrying On With the American Legion

Hundreds of the small craft that were used to sweep the North sea clear of mines during the war are to be put on the scrap pile, a navy order states.

Ten dollars a month for each month's service, with 25 per cent additional for overseas service, is to be paid World war veterans of Maryland by the state.

The veterans of the "battle of Wash-ington" during the World war are being rapidly scattered. The latest order transfers 108 officers out of the capital city.

Reorganization of war-time draft boards to assist the Legion in finding jobs for service men has been proposed by Dr. John Grier Hibben, president of Princeton university.

In a house-to-house canvass of Indian cities, Honsler Legionnaires interviewed 130,000 former service men and women and listed 1,249 cases involving disability, compensation and lost liberty bonds.

DRINK ONLY MILK THAT YOU KNOW IS SAFE

And when we say "milk that you know is safe," we mean milk that has been put through the pasteurization process. That is the only process that positively destroys the greatest number of germs and bacteria in milk that comes from well-fed, contented cows.

The milk, given the closest care from the time it is taken from the cows until it reaches our plant, is put through the process that takes out the greatest possible number of germs and brings to you a milk that is not only pure but is high in nutritive elements.

Drink milk—drink lots of it, but be sure that it is pasteurized.

CURE DIGESTIVE DISORDERS

Value of Charcoal as Preventive of Ailments Cannot Be Over-Emphasized.

The value of charcoal can scarcely be over-emphasized and it should be fed to fowls of all ages as a preventive of bowel disorders and disease. It is best to keep it before the fowls at all times, as there is no danger of them eating too much. Charcoal has a great purifying effect in absorbing noxious gases and will correct many digestive disorders.

Later Garden Planting.

Later garden vegetables require less work and less anxiety, as a rule, than early vegetables. The soil should be neither too hard to prepare nor should it be so slow to germinate and start growing the plants as early plantings.

Advantage of Clover.

When the ground in cultivated fields becomes hard and dry in the growing season we should know that the soil is calling for humus. The best humus is made by growing clover.

BIG IMPORTANCE OF ROOSTER

Impossible to Get Best Results With-out Use of Good Male—Is Half the Flock.

The male is half the flock. Without a good male it is impossible to get good results. It is more dangerous however, to use a poor male than it is a poor female for the reason that from one male bird a greater number of chicks carrying his blood will be hatched than where a poor female is allowed to remain in the flock.

MALES FOR BREEDING STOCK

Not Advisable to Wait Until Last Minute to Select Fowls to Head Poultry Flock.

Don't wait until the last minute to buy males for your poultry breeding pens. If you do, the best will be gone and you'll have to take what's left. A breeder sells by process of elimination, disposing of the best first. So, the earlier you buy, the better will be the stock you get.

DE VALERA DEFIES THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT

DENIES RIGHT OF BRITISH AUTHORITY TO SAY WHAT IRELAND SHALL DO OR SHALL NOT DO; REPLY TO CHURCHILL

Dublin, Ireland, June 1.—De Valera today defied the British Government.

Winston Churchill's challenge to Ireland to uphold both the letter and the spirit of the peace treaty was answered by the Republican leader in emphatic fashion. He said, "We deny the right of any British authority to say what Ireland shall and shall not do."

The British Colonial Secretary declared the Collins-De Valera agreement providing for a coalition form of government in Ireland imperiled the treaty because it admitted two Irish Government men who have refused to sign an oath of allegiance to the Crown. Churchill told the Irish officials they must sign this oath or Great Britain might be forced once again to assume authority in Ireland.

Belfast, Ireland, June 1.—The Belfast death toll for the past twenty-four hours mounted to thirteen this afternoon when John Keane, a truck driver, was dragged from his machine and shot in York Road. A child and ten other victims were in the city morgue today as the result of the killings of last night and this morning.

The call is to all teachers and workers in the grades of Sunday school scholars under 12 years of age. The conference will discuss the problems confronting such workers, methods of instruction, questions of graduation, cradle roll matters, and of especial importance will be the action in the direction of better organization and cooperation of the county and district Children's Division. It will be a meeting of far reaching influence. There will be two sessions, the first at 11 a. m. and the second at 1:30 p. m., in the Presbyterian church.

PROBLEM OF WARD- PETERS SLAYING NO NEARER SOLUTION

White Plains, N. Y., June 1.—Increased activity in the investigation of the slaying of Clarence Peters by Walter S. Ward was noticeable here today. It was learned that the Pinkerton Detective Agency has been employed to assist West Chester county officials in their attempt to unravel the deep mystery. The chief of police of New Rochelle, where Ward was a commissioner, told District Attorney Waite that he gave Ward a 32 calibre Smith & Weston pistol some time ago. Ward turned a pistol of similar make and calibre over to the authorities last week and declared it was the gun used by Peters in the alleged gun battle on the lonely road where Peters' body was found. An examination of Ward's home failed to discredit his story.

Orchardists along the Columbia River and in the vicinity of Corbett, Oregon, are threatened by brush fires and smoke from the fires is sweeping into this city.

COMMISSIONER REED HEARS COMPLAINTS ON BUS LINE SERVICE

Ex-Judge John W. Reed, of the Pennsylvania Public Service Commission, presided at several public service hearings in the Arbitration room of the Court House this morning.

Among the cases heard was the complaint of the citizens of the Paradise section who find fault with the service given them by the Fullington Auto Bus Company. They complain because the present schedule provides for but every other bus proceeding to the end of the improved road. They ask that every bus traverse the road to the end of the line and objection was also made to the ten cent fare charged for the extreme distance.

The Auto Bus Company contends that "every other bus" is ample to take care of the business at the end of the line and even that service is given at a loss.

Considerable testimony was taken, which will later be reviewed by the full Public Service Commission and a decision rendered.

The application of the Edwards Motor Transit Company of Curwensville, for a certificate for a bus line between Curwensville and DuBois was also heard. The Pennsylvania Railroad Company, represented by Passenger Agent Morris Langacre of Harrisburg, and local Counsel J. P. O'Laughlin, made a fight against the granting of the certificate, alleging it would interfere with the railroad's revenues.

NON-UNION MINES MAKE AGREEMENT ON PRICE OF OUTPUT

Washington, D. C., June 1.—The American public will pay from 10% to 15% less for coal so long as the mine strike continues. It was determined here today under an agreement between Secretary of Commerce Hoover and the non-union operators. Departmental and Congressional officials said this action was assured as a result of the conference. Prices will be based on a rate of $3.00 per ton at the mines. Practically every non-union district has submitted its fair price scale to the newly appointed central committee which will sit at Washington to co-ordinate orders and shipments. The figures range from $2.45 to $3.50 for the various localities. The highest demand is made by the Southern West Virginia coal fields where the $3.50 price will obtain for the highest grade of coal. The lowest is the Alabama field where the $2.45 price will predominate. These figures are considerably under those that have been charged in the last few weeks and Government estimators placed the drop at from 10 to 15 per cent.

I must express very frankly that I was received by them with the utmost hospitality and generosity. I can assure them that their friendship and kindness will never be erased from my memory.

MANUAL TRAINING EXHIBIT IS WELL WORTH A VISIT TO THE HIGH SCHOOL

The exhibit of the manual training department of the Clearfield High School which is on display in the basement on the east side of the High School building today and tomorrow is certainly well worth a visit.

The Progress representative drifted over that way this morning and after looking the exhibit and the manual training department over we were convinced that not only does Prof. W. I. Tawes know his business but that he possesses the happy faculty of being able to interest his pupils in their work.

Heretofore, or in years gone by our manual training instruction appeared to be all along the line of teaching the High School boy to put together the materials prepared and provided for the article to be manufactured or built. Things are different nowadays as Prof. Tawes after giving out his lesson requires the boy artisan to prepare his own plan or blue print of the article to be constructed. Many very creditable plans are on exhibition in the first room entered by the visitor to the exhibit.

The finished objects or articles are found in the second room plentifully displayed about the walls, on tables and on the floor of the room. Each article displayed tells its own story, in that it denotes to the practised eye the character or individuality of the boy who made it.

The work room occupies bright, roomy quarters at the south end of the basement and is fitted up with a full complement of machinery and tools. There are lot of good things we could tell you about this department, which is planning and developing a wealth of worth while ideas in minds of Clearfield's youth, but we're not going to do it at this time, and will close by simply asking you to drop in and look it over and see for yourself what is being accomplished.

NEAR HALF MILLION TREES PLANTED IN COUNTY THIS YEAR

Harrisburg, Pa., May 31.—Figures compiled by the State Department of Forestry show that this spring 41 owners of forest land set out a total of 434,200 forest trees in Clearfield County. More trees would have been planted but the big demand for planting stock exhausted all the available nursery supply early in the spring. Orders were placed for a total of more than seven million trees. Reports indicate that most of the planted trees are growing well, and in time will produce excellent lumber.

The nurseries operated by the State Department of Forestry shipped out more than three and one half million trees this spring, the largest number ever sent out in a single planting season. This spring for the first time, forest trees were planted in every county in the State. This year's nursery out put is fifty times greater than the total shipments ten years ago. The three and one half million planted trees will reforest more than 3,500 acres of idle forest land and when grown up should produce 265,000 cords of wood.

FIREMEN FORM VOLLEY BALL LEAGUE

At a meeting of representatives of the hose companies held in No. 1 Fire House last evening, a volley ball league was formed as one of the recreational activities in the program of Clearfield Community Service. J. K. Potter was chosen chairman, and Messrs. Hobart White, R. L. Whitehill and P. J. Raymond the committee in charge of the games. A schedule will be played at Reedsville on June 7th.

Considerable enthusiasm has been aroused by Mr. Melvin Sheppard during his assignment in Clearfield by National Community Service, and it is believed that this league among the hose companies will be followed by others.

Equipment for volley ball has been ordered for each of the four play grounds and will be available for evening play by the young men and women of the neighborhoods.

The baseball game in the Community Service Sunday School Base Ball League between the Intermediate teams of the Lutherans and Presbyterians will be played at 5:30 tomorrow, Friday afternoon, instead of Saturday, as previously announced.

HEARING BEGINS ON ALLEGED DEFICITS IN THE STATE TREASURY

Kephart's Attorney In Opening Speech Denies Authority Of Auditor
General Lewis To Act.

MOVE OVERRULED

Harrisburg, Pa., June 1.—William A. Glasgow, Jr., attorney for former State Treasurer Kephart, today questioned Auditor General Lewis' authority in calling the first public hearing in the Treasury investigation. Glasgow said that he and Kephart did not want to hamper investigation, but wanted proper limitations set. He also said the Statute of 1918 did not contemplate bringing the State Treasurer into a public hearing such as is being conducted by Auditor General Lewis. Glasgow argued from the statutes that the scope of this inquiry must be limited to an attempt to ascertain if Mr. Kephart owes the State money, it can have nothing to do with the method of keeping his accounts. He declared that the auditors' accounting should be completed before an explanation was demanded.

Edward J. Fox argued that the Auditor General has ample power under the Act of 1911 to hold the hearings and the objections of attorney Glasgow were overruled.

The hearing opened at 10:07 A. M. Auditor General Lewis and Attorney General Alter sat together at the desk as joint presiding officers. The first few minutes were occupied with identification of photostatic copies of Treasury and bank records.

Uncommon Sense

MARRY "FOR KEEPS"

IF YOU have a capital of a thousand dollars, and only a thousand dollars, you are likely to be a little particular about investing it.

Yet you invest your capital of happiness which is all you have, and all you ever will have on the first pretty face you happen to see.

The average youth devotes more care to the selection of a suit of clothes than he does to the selection of a wife.

When his marriage turns out unhappily, he wonders why he happened to have had luck, or cynically observes that you never can trust a woman.

About 90 per cent of the labor and expense of the divorce courts could be avoided if young men and women would expend a little serious thought about the most serious business of their lives, which is getting married.

Neither men nor women can so skillfully disguise their true natures as to deceive anybody who is really in earnest about investing his capital of happiness where it will pay dividends for all time.

Nobody ever falls so head over ears in love at first sight that he hasn't time to think over the seriousness of picking a wife before he sends for the best man and engages the minister.

There is no source of unhappiness in the world so prolific as marriage, chiefly because nobody ever appears to think that it should be entered in any way save by accident.

If the reformers who cry out against divorce, when it is too late, would spend the same amount of time and energy trying to teach people to find the right kind of mates there would be less divorce less scandal and more room in the newspapers for instructive news.

You can't tell a man anything he doesn't know about the mistake of an unhappy marriage if he already has made the mistake. You can tell him a good deal about it beforehand.

Some day preachers and editors and educators will organize instruction in matrimony parents will devote a little time to talking to children about it, and as a result there will be about 50 per cent more happiness in the world.

WHY?

IS THERE SAND AT THE SEASHORE

THE presence of the sand which makes beaches and drifts into dunes along the edge of the sea dates back originally to the formation of the earth itself. At this time millions of years ago the land and rocks which now form what we know as "the crust of the earth," was a molten mass, in which was a large proportion of the element known to science as "silicon." This silicon was burned and, in conjunction with the oxygen which surrounded everything produced the substance known as "silica" or "burned silicon." A large portion of this was deposited on the surface of the earth and, when the world cooled, it formed a sort of crust or granular deposit, to which the name of "sandstone" has been applied.

When the oceans were formed the action of the water in constantly wearing away this sandstone broke it up into tiny particles and formed the sand as we see it today. The reason that this appears in large quantities on the edge of the ocean is because the motion of the waves and the tides constantly swept it up from the bed of the sea and deposited it on the beaches, where it remains silently to testify to events which happened long before the memory of man.

HORSE SHOE PITCHERS WILL GET CHESTY

The entire West Side is taking to horse shoe pitching like a duck to water and the rattle of steel against steel is heard throughout that region. The latest organized bid for fame as cricketers of the iron peg is the West Sixth Avenue team. It is captained by Doris Lytle, who has with him Luther Hubler, Bill Adams, Ralph Dunlap, Alex Hughets, and Willard Ogden.

They are new at the game but very chesty and say they can not only "ring the hub" but they can "pitch rings around" any other team in that section.

In that connection and while we are talking on horse shoe pitching, it might be well to briefly mention the experience of a couple of Turnpike Avenue "horse shoe sharks." They felt just like those West Sixth Avenue fellows and decided to trim a couple of Nichols street cricks. They started it alright, but Nichols street finished it as strong as hamburger cheese. The Turnpike Avenue team was composed of Paul Gilbert and Raymond Boyce. The experts they proposed humiliating were Shipley and Peters. Here's the score for the three games:

How to Make and Use It

By A. HYATT VERRILL

II. PRINCIPLES OF WIRELESS TRANSMISSION

Before attempting to explain the functions and the principles of the radio telephones or describing how to make, use and operate them, it is necessary to understand something of the underlying principles and fundamental laws of wireless transmission.

It is not however, necessary to enter into a long discussion on the theories and principles of electricity or physics which enter into the subject but merely to illustrate and make clear a few important and salient laws, causes and results which make the transmission of sounds possible without the use of wires between the sending and receiving instruments.

The first and most important principle of all radio transmission is the fact that all our atmosphere is constantly disturbed by vibrations or oscillations or, as we may call them for the sake of simplicity, waves. We are accustomed to think of the atmosphere about us as a more or less uniform substance which we call air, but in reality the air or atmosphere, space, and in fact all solids as well as liquids are pervaded by an invisible, odorless, and almost weightless but exceedingly elastic substance known as ether or luminiferous ether. It is by means of this ether that all heat, light, electricity, etc., are transmitted, in the form of waves or vibrations. Light and heat waves have been known to science for a long time but it is only within comparatively recent years that man has learned that electric or electro-magnetic waves also travel through the ether and it was through this discovery, and by means of these waves that wireless telegraphy and telephony became possible. In a way the electro-magnetic waves are very similar to the waves or ripples formed by dropping a stone in a calm pool of water, for, just as the water waves travel in gradually widening circles from the splash, so the electric waves, started by the spark of a wireless transmitting or sending instrument, spread in ever widening circles through the ether. Moreover, just as the waves in the pool are short and clear near the spot where the stone is thrown and gradually become longer and less noticeable and farther apart as they flow from the splash, so wireless waves are clearer and sharper near the instrument and decrease in clearness and size as they get farther and farther away and, to draw still another comparison, just as the shore of the pool or any object in the water interrupts or breaks the waves, so a wireless receiving instrument will interrupt or receive the electrical waves of the ether. Indeed, just as the waves of vibrations set up by the wireless spark are electro-magnetic waves and the energy that starts them is electrical energy, so the waves in the pool are started by mechanical or mechanical energy. You can readily understand how it would be possible to communicate by means of such liquid waves, for, if a person at a distance should toss stones into the water at stated intervals, a person watching the shore, and noticing the intervals of the waves, could understand signals which had been prearranged. This, of course, would be a very crude and inefficient method of communication, but if you could devise some instrument to count and measure the waves and could devise means for sending waves of definite sizes and numbers, a practical means of communication could be established. It is just this which occurs in the transmission and reception of electric magnetic or wireless waves, for by breaking or interrupting the waves sent out by the spark they are transformed into long and short sections which correspond to dots and dashes as used in wireless telegraphy. These wave sections motion by the sending apparatus possess the property of staying oscillation in any conductor which they strike, and if they strike the aerial or an antenna of a wireless station they start oscillations in the wires, but so faint and weak that they would not be detected unless sensitive instruments were provided to amplify and catch them. Such instruments are known as detectors and are constructed of various substances or devices which are adjustable and from which wires lead to a telephone receiver. The high frequency oscillations of the ether, which are known as alternating currents, as they flow back and forth are cut off by the magnets in the receiver, while the detector is designed to allow the oscillations to pass through in one direction, but will not allow them to return, and thus it acts as a check-valve in a water pipe and the alternating back and forth currents are transformed into impulses going in one direction only and known as direct currents. These will flow through a telephone receiver and cause the diaphragm to vibrate and thus the ear detects the interrupted buzz, sounds which indicate the dots and dashes of the code. Another very important part of the mechanism of the wireless apparatus is the transformer without this the various vibrations of the ether sent out from numberless stations would come as a hodge-podge of meaningless sounds to the receiver. But by arranging the receiving instrument so it may be adjusted to receive or pick up only those waves of a certain length, all other vibrations, and the messages they carry are eliminated or cut out. So the wireless operator who is receiving messages may adjust his instrument back and forth until he picks up any message which may be passing through the ether at the time.

ODDS AND ENDS
AND THINGS

By J. D. C.

Vintondale should petition the State Department for recognition as a country or government the same as Mexico is doing. The United States appears to have great need of a representative at Vintondale to look after the rights of her American citizens, as that town is governed by its own constitution and own laws and any person the thugs guarding the town don't want there is clubbed right out of the place. This, too, in free America and right here in old Pennsylvania, where hangs the bell which once upon a time proclaimed liberty to all the world.

The United States Army stand fourteenth in the list of armies of the world in actual numerical strength. And twenty-fifth of the size of the army is compared to the total population of the country. Russia is first with an army of 1,370,000 men. China is second with 1,083,000 and France third with 818,000. Other armies in order, are:

Abyssinia, 471,000; Greece, 310,000; Japan, 302,000; Poland, 200,000; Italy, 250,000; Great Britain, 237,000; India, 221,000; Spain, 216,000; Turkey, 188,000; Roumania, 186,000; and the United States, 158,000.

What is the matter with these lawyers of ours who happen to be a chain of fortunate circumstances to get catapulted into the high office of Attorney General of the United States. We thought the limit was reached when A. Misfit Palmer was dropped overboard but the job appears to be destined for "birds of a feather" lately regardless of party label. The present "encumbrance," like his unlamented predecessor, is now charged among many other things with turning over to "Swiss" claimants of 34,000 shares in the American Metal Company by the present Alien Property Custodian on the order of Attorney General Daugherty. The property now represented by seven million dollars worth of Liberty Bonds, was taken from a German owned corporation during the war. Before the property could be returned it was necessary to show that a non-enemy owned it and this was done to the satisfaction of Daugherty regardless of the previous declaration of the real owners when it was seized. The law says such return or property right could not be established except by public hearing, but none was held and the "Swiss claimants" were given the millions by Daugherty's unsupported order.

New York Courts are convicting criminals so rapidly that Sing Sing prison, with a capacity of 1200, now contains 1216 prisoners.

Prohibition Commissioner Haynes says no less than thirty-one dry enforcement officers were killed by bootleggers last year. "The use of firearms to overtake fugitive rum runners, whether in vehicles or on foot, is countenanced only in extreme circumstances, when there is good reason to believe contraband liquor is involved."

HAY SHIPPERS FREQUENTLY MEET
WITH LOSS IN EARLY SHIPMENTS

Tight Baling and Close Packing of Hay Cause Heating.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Every year when new hay begins to be marketed, reports from several central western hay markets show that much of the new hay arriving is hot and out of condition, and must be sold at a heavy discount under the price quoted for No. 1 hay. There are a number of causes, but the bureau of markets and crop estimates of the United States Department of Agriculture believes the principal one is that the hay is baled and shipped before it has cured sufficiently and while it contains too much moisture.

Baling Newly Cut Hay Is Risky.

It is the custom in some sections to bale the hay from the windrow or cock in order to avoid the expense of stacking or putting in the barn. It is almost always true that the first new hay shipped to the various markets is baled in this way. In most of the timothy-producing sections weather conditions are such that it is not safe to allow the hay to remain long in either the windrow or cock, if the best quality of hay is to be obtained. Local showers or heavy dews, followed by a hot sun, will soon cause it to bleach and deteriorate. It is, therefore, the practice to bale just as soon as, in the judgment of the producer or shipper, the hay can be safely shipped. This is frequently entirely too soon for the conditions under which it is marketed.

The movement of hay from a dry to a humid section, or from a cool to a warmer one, increases the probability of heating. Tight baling and close packing in the cars are contributing causes, and apply to timothy and prairie hay as well as to timothy.

Higher prices invite early shipment. The easiest way to avoid the losses caused by hay getting out of condition is to ship new hay until it has gone through the "sweat" and becomes properly cured in the mow or stack. The premiums usually offered for early shipments of new hay are very inviting, however. The first new hay, if in good condition, often sells near the price of old hay which, as the season draws to a close, is frequently high. The new hay is heavier, too, and the shipper profits from the sale of the water in it, even though it sells below the price of old hay. The chance of getting these premiums causes many shippers to take the risk of the losses that continually occur. It is very doubtful, however, if the premiums equal the losses during the first week or two of the movement.

While the shipment of new hay is not advised until it is cured so as to contain not more than 14 or 15 per cent moisture, a few suggestions are offered by the Department of Agriculture, which, if followed, will tend to eliminate

Harvesting Hay.

nate some of the losses frequently incurred. The principal ones are:

Press the hay in the bale as closely as possible to get the minimum weight in the car.

Load hay in cars with air space about the bales; standing the bales on end is considered a good practice.

Ship first hay to near-by markets only.

Hay shipped into low or humid territories should be drier than when shipped into dry or high sections.

Provide ventilation for cars when possible.

Bill cars so that no delay will occur in handling or unloading at destination.

SERUM DOES NOT ELIMINATE

Clean-Up of Hog Cholera Cannot Be Expected Through Use of This Modern Treatment.

Some persons think that the use of hog cholera serum has become so general that we are far on the way toward the elimination of the disease, but, according to the United States Department of Agriculture, a clean-up of cholera can not be expected through the use of this method. Besides, only a small percentage of the hogs in the country are treated each year and there is also almost a complete turnover of the swine population each year. Every 12 months we start with a new lot of pigs and the fight against disease must start at the beginning again.

About 500,000,000 cubic centimeters of serum are used every year, which means that, counting 50 cubic centimeters for each hog, only about 10,000,000 hogs are treated. In recent years there have been around 70,000,000 hogs in the country on January 1, according to federal crop estimates, which means many more hogs in the spring and summer. If all these hogs were treated, cholera would not be eliminated. It would simply be made impotent to kill many hogs for one season and would begin to kill again the next season if serum were not used. Serum treatment, like insurance, can not be allowed to lapse.

In the sheep flock the purebred sire is a money maker. The lambs from the purebred ram weighed more at three months of age than the lambs sired by the inferior ram at four months of age.

Sergt. M. Waldo Hatter of Joplin, Mo., Wears Medals for World War Bravery.

In the fighting in France Sergt. M. Waldo Hatter of Joplin, Mo., swam the Meuse river under fire after a comrade had perished in the attempt, landed within the German lines and explored their positions thoroughly and swam back across the river with information of great value to the American command. For this he has received the croce di guerra of Italy, the equivalent of the French croix de guerre.

Hatter met Gen. Armando Diaz, commander in chief of the Italian armies in the World war, at the third national convention of the American Legion in Kansas City. After this meeting the Italian decoration was presented at a special ceremony in Joplin. The Missourian also wears the American Medal of Honor and the French croix de guerre.

Two Months Could Not Turn in Bed. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Finally Restored Health.

Seattle, Washington.—"I had dragging pains first and could not stand on my feet, then I had chills and fever and such pains in my right side and a hard lump there. I could not turn myself in bed and could not sleep. I was this way for over two months, trying everything any one told me, until my sister brought me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it regularly until all the hard pains had left me and I was able to be up and to do my work again. The hard lump left my side and I feel splendid in all ways. I know of many women it has helped."—Mrs. G. Richardson, 4640 Orcus St., Seattle, Washington.

This is another case where Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brought results after trying everything any one told me had failed. If you are suffering from pain, nervousness and are always tired, if you are low spirited and good for nothing, take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. You may not only relieve the present distress, but prevent the development of more serious trouble.

"SPRINGTIME"—A MUSICAL COMEDY TO
BE GIVEN HERE ABOUT JUNE 22nd

Arrangements have been completed by a committee of the Junior Women's Club, headed by Helen O'Brien, for the production of "Springtime," a musical comedy De Luxe, under the direction of John B. Rogers Producing Company, at the Driggs Theatre here sometime about June 22nd or 23rd.

Members of the cast and choruses will be selected from the best talent in Clearfield. The production promises to be of exceptional merit, as the talent in Clearfield is of better quality than the usual amateur calibre. The scenery and costumes as furnished by the producer are said to be the last word in splendor and beauty. A professional director will be sent here to take charge of the staging of the entertainment.

Rehearsals, it is said, will begin about June 6th.

Entered in Post Office at Clearfield, Pa., as second class mail matter.

Some time ago a group of upper classmen of Columbia University invaded little old New York and started to paint a portion of the old town red. These college boys might well have kept mum about being from Columbia. The university itself and its officers had nothing to do with the boys while they were off the college campus, had no control over them and were not responsible for whatever they might have done. The boys, however, were full of the college spirit. They gave their yells and their war dances. Immediately those who saw them charged Columbia University with laxity and there was a general condemnation of colleges for permitting such hoodlum actions by its students. The college was not at fault. Every son's father knew his boy was away from the restraining influence of the college, a law unto himself. But what he did not know was what the aforesaid son was doing. But why all this about Columbia? What does it have to do with us here in Clearfield? Just this:

The classes in our high school and grade schools are winding up their school year. They have been studying in classes as units. Naturally their relaxation and recreation will be in class units. Their social affairs take on a similar complexion. So long as these functions are held in the school buildings and on the school grounds there will be proper chaperonage and direction of youthful impulses. When a class or a group of students leave the school property, whether they hold their function as a class or not, they are in no manner subject to the rules of the school and parents will do well to keep this in mind.

It is absurd to say that Harding, having appointed Daugherty, will ask for his resignation. Neither will any party leader suggest that Daugherty resign.

To compare the hullabaloo about Daugherty and Morse with the Ballinger case is ridiculous. The Ballinger case involved a great national question of change in the country's policy about conserving its natural resources, on which question great groups of people felt strongly.

All this about Daugherty and Morse is of the past. It has been an issue in nearly every political campaign in Ohio ten years, and Daugherty always has admitted it, justified it, and presented letters from William Howard Taft and James H. Wickersham, backing up his justification.

The only new things are the actual letters in the case, and they don't present any new fact except that Morse never paid the fee he promised to pay for the service rendered.

If anybody supposes that the reading of these letters into the Congressional Record by an opposition Senator was a pious act of disinterested public service, he must be guileless. That action had exactly the same sort of political motive as that which was in the mind of the Republican Senator who answered by naming and impugning some members of Woodrow Wilson's political and personal family.

The more important Democratic leaders aren't taking part in the revival of the Morse case, although they are willing to let some minor ones do it, on the theory that it is no worse than the kind of politics the Republicans used to play against the Wilson administration.

The old Morse case has nothing to do with Daugherty's conduct of his present office. Not even the most violent of his enemies suggests that. It is true that Morse now is being prosecuted for a new offense, but everybody knows this new Morse case was initiated and is being pushed by a wholly separate department of the government, the shipping board, whose lawyers are not under Daugherty's control.

Daugherty's connection with the Morse pardon ten years ago was brought up at the time Harding was about to appoint Daugherty as attorney general. It was said, against Daugherty's appointment, that if he were attorney general this old case would be sure to be brought up by some political opponent or by some litigant interest in discrediting the department of justice. The present situation justifies this prediction.

Daugherty's conduct of his office has disarmed many of his critics, and some very dependable persons who in the beginning opposed his appointment will stand by him now with firm conviction. The way Daugherty has kept his office free from politics and has stood off the Republican Senators and Congressmen who wanted federal judgeships and other offices for their friends has amazed and delighted those who thought Daugherty's availability for the office of attorney general was impaired by the fact that he was too much of a politician and too close to the actual management of Harding's campaign and the obligations that arise out of every campaign.

GROWING RADISH IS EASY MATTER

Garden Does Not Seem Complete
Without Short Row or Patch
of Vegetables.

RICH SOIL MOST IMPORTANT

Almost Any Variety Is Good, Main
Difference Being in Type of Root
—It Is Cool Weather Plant
and Grows Quickly.

The radish is practically a universal vegetable. It is now in the market the year around and rarely is there a garden planted without at least a short row or small patch broadcast to these pungent appetizers of the garden. There isn't a great difference in the various kinds of radish offered for sale by the seedsmen and almost any of them will be successful. The main difference is in the type of root.

Stick a pencil blindly on almost any of them and order the one spiked and you will have good radishes if the garden conditions are suitable for growing good radishes at all.

In the South the radish can be grown outdoors almost all winter except in the colder sections, plantings being made every ten days or two weeks for succession. In the North it is the first vegetable to go into the ground in the spring. In fact, it should be planted as soon as the soil can be worked, as it is quite hardy and won't be hurt by a little frost.

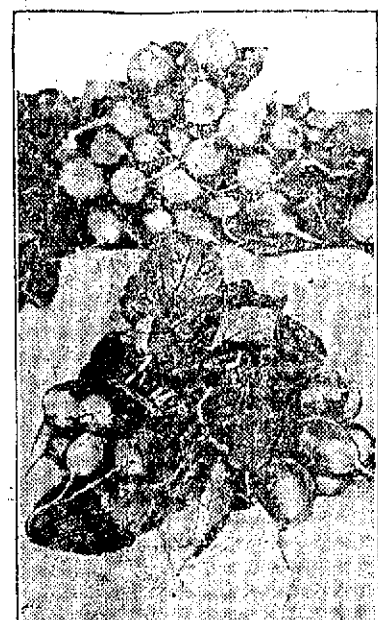

It is Cool Weather Plant.

It is a cool weather plant and must be grown steadily and quickly. Hot weather or a dry spell, either giving a check in growth, result in hollow, pithy roots, which are quite worthless. Cool and fairly moist conditions make the crisp, solid, toothsome radishes that everyone relishes in the early days of spring.

Of the white radishes, Icicle has attained great popularity and is a fine radish. It is excellent in the summer when other types are not at their best. In case of doubt, French Breakfast in the olive shade, Scarlet Globe in the round, and some of the 20-day specialties can be recommended. Any of the long scarlet types give a the same result, the improvement in the newer varieties being in regularity and uniformity of growth.

Radish soil must be rich and fine and deeply worked. It is best to have the manure dug in during the fall or if this has not been done it should be well rotted and well incorporated with the soil in the spring. Radishes will grow almost anywhere if the soil is rich and in almost any sort of soil except clay. Clay soil needs to be lightened with ashes or sand and copious dressings of manure spaded into it. Radishes are to do their best in it. Radishes may be sown broadcast provided the seed is not scattered too thickly or in rows as close together as six inches.

Clean Up Rubbish.

Clean up last year's garden if this was not attended to in the fall. All remnants of vegetables and flowers must be gathered together and burned. This will destroy the eggs of innumerable insects. Weeds should likewise be destroyed, but do not yet destroy mulches, which have been placed over hardy plants and around shrubs. If you have not already sprinkled limestone over your garden area, this is a good time to do it so that the spring freezing and thawing and the early rains may help to disintegrate and carry the lime water into the soil to sweeten it. Lime is especially beneficial to grapes.

HOW TO KEEP YOUR BABY WELL

A Weekly Talk to Mothers Issued
Through The Babies' Prophylactic
Clinic, Henry Phipps Institute, 7th
and Lombard Streets, Philadelphia.

Clothing the Baby

Dress the baby carefully, turning him as little as possible. The mother soon learns the quickest and best way. It tires baby when dressing takes so long.

Clothing must be suited to the weather and to the age and condition of the child. Young babies and those who are weakly need warm clothing, as they are easily chilled. Robust babies quickly get used to the changes in the weather, and are often too warmly dressed, especially when they are older and start to run about.

If the baby's hands and feet are cold or he looks pinched and blue about the lips, he needs warmer clothing. If he perspires and his body is moist to the touch, he has too much on. Overdressed babies are likely to be restless and fretful. In hot weather, the clothes should be light; in cold weather much heavier and warmer clothes are needed. Most doctors believe that shirts, bands, stocking for the baby should have some wool in them. If necessary they may be of the lightest weight, and in the hottest weather only the band, diaper and slip need be worn.

All baby's clothing should be simple. Dresses and shirts may be 26 inches long, the extra length being used to cover the baby's feet. Many mothers rather have baby's dresses short from the start. This saves both time and money.

The following list gives the clothing a new born baby needs:

Diapers, dozen, 4 to 6.
Knitted Bands, Number 2.
Knitted shirts, Number 2 to 4.
Flannel Petticoats, Number 2 to 4.
Night Gowns, 3.
White cotton slips, Number 4 to 8.
Coats and Capes.
Long Booties or Stockings, pairs 2 to 4.

Sasques, Number 3.
Wraps or blankets, Number 3.
How to make and take care of these things will be discussed in the next few talks.

When dressing or undressing the baby place him on the table described in the talk on Baby's Bath and draw the clothing over his feet rather than over his head. Never use starch in washing a baby's clothes as it makes them stiff and rubs and chafes the skin.

The important things to remember about a baby's clothing are that they should fit the body, be loose enough to give the baby free use of his arms and legs, and still be tight enough to be comfortable.

News of Our Neighbors

CURWENSVILLE

The Commencement Exercises of the High School, Class of 1922, passed off most delightfully last evening at the Opera House. The program as published in Monday's issue was carried out in detail except that on account of the continued illness of Supt. W. P. Trostle, Dr. H. O. King, President of the Board of Education presented the Diplomas. The class composed of twenty-five members is the largest since 1917 which graduated the same number. The oration on "Patriotism" by Miss Cora Wolf carrying with it Salutory and by Miss Frances Cook on "Education Preparedness" carrying the Valedictory were well written and well rendered. The prize for excellence in history, given by the Susquehanna Chapter of the D. A. R. was awarded to Mr. Reuben Moore. The Honor medal, given by the Joshua Earl Sipes Post No. 505 American Legion was awarded to Mr. Harold Starr, Class of 1923.

Supt. H. J. Barrett was introduced by Prof. Norris and the ovation which he received bespoke the place he holds in the hearts of the people of Curwensville. After a few words of greeting Mr. Barrett took up his theme "How Shall I Do It?" During his entire discourse he held the closest attention of his audience. Space forbids a detailed account of his address. His advice and counsel to the graduates ought to sink deep into their hearts. He urged the necessity of four salient features in life if they hoped to be able to cope with the world and successfully meet the crisis which must necessarily be met. These four are briefly "Proper Habits", "Usable Knowledge", "High Ideal" and "Proper Attitude". These he clinched by timely illustrations which could not help but drive them home into the minds and hearts of all the young folks who heard him.

At the close of the Commencement exercises the Alumni Banquet was held at the Park Hotel, detailed account of which will be given in a later issue.

MARY MARIE

By Eleanor H. Porter

I Went Into the Library. Father Stood With His Back to the Fireplace and His Hands in His Pockets.

"Then you did refuse?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, you may go and tell her now, please, that you are sorry, and that you will go to school this afternoon. You may go now." And he turned to the table and picked up his book. I didn't go, of course. I just stood there twisting my handkerchief in my fingers; and, of course, right away he saw me. He had sat down then.

"Mary, didn't you hear me?" he demanded.

"Yes, sir, but—Father, I can't go back to that school," I choked. And I began to cry.

"But I tell you that you must."

"I shook my head."

"Do you mean that you defy me as you did your Aunt Jane this morning?"

"That you refuse to go back to school?"

"Yes, sir."

For a minute he sat and stared at me just as Aunt Jane had done; then he lifted his hand and threw back his shoulders as if he was throwing off a heavy weight.

"Come, come, Mary," he said sternly. "I am not a patient man, and my temper has reached the breaking point. You will go back to school and you will go now. I mean that, Mary."

"But, Father, I can't," I choked; and I guess there was something in my face this time that made even him see. For again he just stared for a minute, and then said:

"Mary, what in the world does this mean? Why can't you go back? Have you been expelled?"

"Oh, no, sir."

"Then you mean you won't go back?"

"I mean I can't—on account of Mother."

I wouldn't have said it if I hadn't had to. I didn't want to tell him, but I knew from the very first that I'd have to tell him before I got through. I could see it in his face. And so, now, with his eyes blazing as he jumped almost out of his chair and exclaimed:

"Your mother? What?"

"Your mother? What?"

"Oh, no, sir."

"Then you mean you won't go back?"

"Your mother? What?"

"Oh, no, sir."

"Why, of course, of course," began Father impatiently, looking down at his paper. "Of course she'll go to—" he stopped suddenly. A complete change came to his face. He grew red, then white. His eyes sort of flashed. "School?" he said then, in a hard, decided voice. "Oh, no; Mary is not going to school tomorrow morning." He looked down to his paper and began to read again. For him the subject was very evidently closed. But for Aunt Jane it was not closed.

"You don't mean, Charles, that she's not to go to school at all, any more," she gasped.

"Exactly." Father read on in his paper without looking up.

Aunt Jane's lips came together hard.

"Charles, I'm amazed at you—yielding to that child's whims like this—but she doesn't want to go to school! It's the principle of the thing that I'm objecting to. Do you realize what it will lead to—what it—"

"June!" with a jerk Father sat up straight. "I realize some things that perhaps you do not. But that is neither here nor there. I do not wish Mary to go to school any more this spring. That is all; and I think—it is sufficient."

"Certainly," Aunt Jane's lips came together again grim and hard. "Perhaps you will be good enough to say what she shall do with her time."

"Time? Do? Why—er—what she always does; read, sew, study—"

"Study?" Aunt Jane asked the question with a hateful little smile that Father would have been blind not to have understood. And he was equal to it—but I must tell over backward when I found how equal to it he was.

"Certainly," he says, "study. I'll hear her lessons myself—in the library, after I come home in the afternoon. Now let us hear no more about it."

With that he pushed back his plate and left the table without waiting for dessert. And Aunt Jane and I were left alone.

I didn't say anything. Victors shouldn't boast—and I was a victor, of course, about the school. But when I thought of what Father had said about my reciting my lessons to him every day in the library—I wasn't so sure whether I'd won or not. Recite lessons to my father? Why, I couldn't even imagine such a thing!

Aunt Jane didn't say anything either. I guess she didn't know what to say. And it was kind of a queer situation, when you came right down to it. Both of us sitting there and knowing I wasn't going back to school any more, and I knowing why, and knowing Aunt Jane didn't know why. (Of course I had not told Aunt Jane about Mother and Mrs. Mayhew.) It would be a funny world, wouldn't it, if we all knew what each other was thinking all the time? Why, we'd get so we wouldn't any of us speak to each other. I'm afraid, we'd be so angry at what the other was thinking.

Well, Aunt Jane and I didn't speak that night at the supper table. We finished in stern silence; then Aunt Jane went upstairs to her room and I went up to mine. (You see what a perfectly wildly exciting life Mary is living! And when I think of how full of good times Mother wanted every minute to be. But that was for Marie, of course.)

The next morning after breakfast Aunt Jane said:

"You will spend your forenoon studying, Mary. See that you learn well your lessons, so as not to annoy your father."

"Yes, Aunt Jane," said Mary, politely and proper, and went upstairs obediently; but even Mary didn't know exactly how to study those lessons.

Carrie had brought me all my books from school. I had asked her to when I knew that I was not going back. There were the lessons that had been assigned for the next day, of course, and I supposed probably Father would want me to study those. But I couldn't imagine Father teaching me all alone. I couldn't imagine myself reciting lessons to Father!

But I needn't have worried. If I could only have known, little did I think—but, there, this is no way to tell a story. I read in a book, "How to Write a Novel," that you mustn't "anticipate." (I thought folks always anticipated novels. I do. I thought you wanted them to.)

Well, to go on.

Father got home at four o'clock. I saw him come up the walk, and I waited till I was sure he'd got settled in the library, then I went down.

He wasn't there.

A minute later I saw him crossing the lawn to the observatory. Well, what to do I didn't know. Mary said to go after him; but Marie said, nay, nay. And in spite of being Mary just now, I let Marie have her way.

MINISTER IS POST LEADER

Rev. H. G. Scoggins, Former Buck Private, Now Strong American Legion Organization.

A Texas county somewhat larger than the state of Rhode Island has been discovered which contributed no commissioned officer to the World war, not even a "shavetail." The highest ranking ex-soldier in the county is a former sergeant of ordnance.

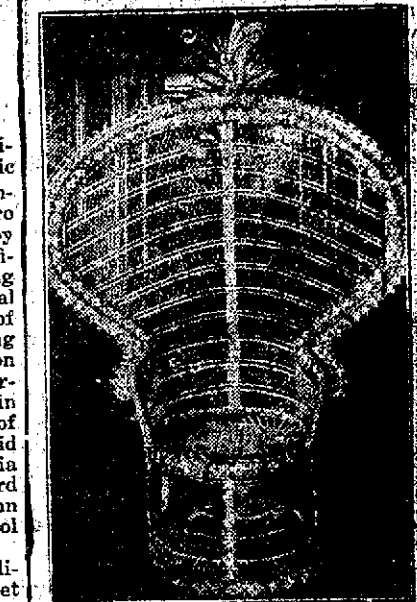

The commander of the local Legion, post at Morant, the county seat, is Rev. H. G. Scoggins, truck driver, Methodist minister and former buck private of infantry. He was a corporal once, but like the immortal Mulvaney, he was "reduced." Under his leading the Morant post has a membership in the county 99 per cent of "possible."

POULTRY

TURKEY HEN IS BEST MOTHER

She Knows Wants of Poults and Can Talk to Them in Language They Soon Learn.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

For poults the turkey hen is the best mother that can be found. She knows their needs and can talk to them in a language they soon learn to understand. At the approach of any danger she gives a low, warning note that sends them scurrying in every direction for a weed or patch of green grass where then can lie flat on the ground safely hidden from view. While on free range, she keeps her brood together by talking continuously in a contented, purring tone, so that the poults always know where she is.

When her poults become widely separated, or if some become lost, she hears their "peep, peep," she calls them with the characteristic yelp heard so frequently during the laying season. Now and then, while the poults are but a few days old, she catches a grasshopper or other insect and calls the poults to come and get it. They soon learn to find their own feed, however, and range out ahead of the mother hen in search of whatever they can find.

Young turkeys usually remain with the mother hen until about October or November, when the males ordinarily separate from the females and range by themselves. When two turkey hens with broods of about the same age are turned out on free range together they will remain in one flock, and as this makes it easier to hunt them up and care for them, it is advisable to turn out two or three hens with their broods together when they are given free range. It is not a good plan to have more than this number of young poults in one flock, say poultry specialists in the United States Department of Agriculture, as they may all try to crowd under one or two hens to be hovered.

GOSLINGS READY TO MARKET

Advisable to Avoid Use of Young Stock in Raising Fowls—Old Birds Are Preferred.

Geese are birds of long life, sometimes living fifteen to twenty years, and ganders are at their best at three, four or five years. The use of immature young stock should be avoided, especially for the renewal of breeding geese, but for the production of early goslings for market, it is often the custom among breeders to use eggs from young geese, as these usually begin to lay earlier than older birds. Such a practice is perfectly proper, but for breeding stock, experienced breeders prefer older or well matured geese and ganders.

Unforgettable.
Man forgets much in this world, but ask any of the old ones if he has forgotten the lessons he learned at mother's and across father's knee.—Houston Post.

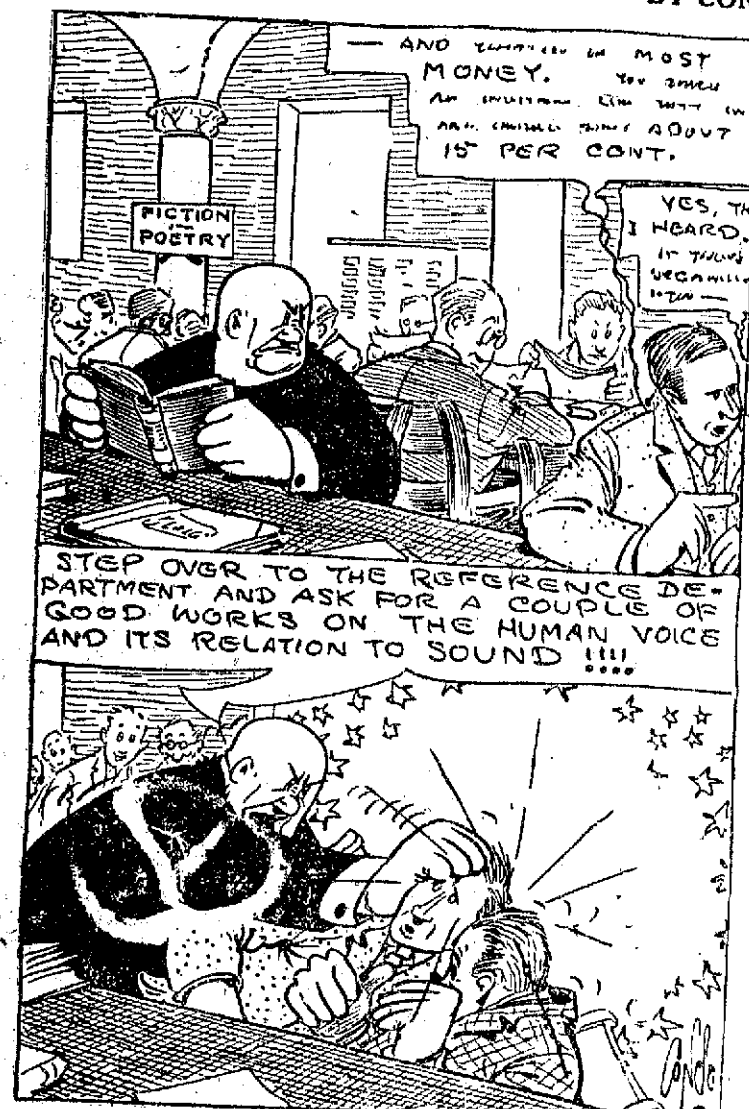

BOWELS PARALYZED—NOW WELL

Suffered Over 20 Years, Yet Nervous—Now Restored

When a man has suffered for over 20 years with indigestion and constipation until his bowels are in a paralyzed condition and he had tried remedies and doctors without relief he is likely to be quite skeptical of what any other remedy may be able to do for him. That was the state of mind in which Mr. James Hudson of Muskogee, Mich., began the use of Nerv-Worth—yet before he had used up the first bottle, so he tells one of our representatives, he began to feel the beneficial effects. His sour stomach was improved, he had no more gas bloated, did not belch after eating, could sleep well and had regular movements of his bowels without artificial aid. This seems truly remarkable, but there are thousands of people through out this country who have had a similar experience with Nerv-Worth and it is for that reason that we authorize every druggist to give the purchase money back if the first bottle fails to show satisfactory and encouraging results, nearly every druggist has it at one dollar a bottle. You can always find it on sale at the Stewart Drug Store in this city. If you suffer from any form of stomach or bowel ailment you should give it a trial at once. It is especially fine for delicate women and sickly children and its taste is very pleasant.

His appointment of a negro boy to Annapolis naval academy is defended by Representative Martin Anson of New York as a matter of justice to the large colored population of his district, and "in recognition of his valor and patriotism of the 500,000 colored boys in the United States service in the World war." The appointee, Eudie Treville Holley, is a freshman in the College of the City of New York. Carrying On With the American Legion

Hundreds of the small craft that were used to sweep the North sea clear of mines during the war are to be put on the scrap pile, a navy order states.

Ten dollars a month for each month's service, with 25 per cent additional for overseas service, is to be paid World war veterans of Maryland by the state.

The veterans of the "battle of Washington" during the World war are being rapidly scattered. The latest order transfers 108 officers out of the capital city.

Reorganization of war-time draft boards to assist the Legion in finding jobs for service men has been proposed by Dr. John Grier Hibben, president of Princeton university.

In a house-to-house canvass of Indian cities, Honsler Legionnaires interviewed 130,000 former service men and women and listed 1,249 cases involving disability, compensation and lost liberty bonds.

2. The most points a contestant can score in a single game are 21. Therefore, if a contestant has 19 points, he cannot get credit for a ringer, but only the necessary points required to bring his total up to 21, even should he make a ringer, which in that case, would count only two points.
3. A shoe that does not remain within 12 inches of the peg shall not be entitled to score.
4. A ringer shall score three points. To be a ringer a shoe must encircle the peg far enough to permit a straight rule to touch both calks and clear the peg.
5. The closest shoe to the peg shall score one point. If both shoes are closer than either of an opponent's they shall score two points.
6. A leamer shall score two points. To be a leamer a shoe must be supported by the peg, and more than one half of the shoe clear off the ground.
7. Two ringers is the highest score a pitcher can make with two shoes, and shall count six points.
8. All equals shall be counted as ties. That is, if both contestants have one shoe each, equal distance from the peg or against it, they are tied and the one having the next closest shoe shall score one point.
9. If each contestant has a leamer, the one having the next closest shoe shall score one point.
10. If each contestant has a ringer, the one having the next closest shoe shall score one point.
11. If one contestant has a ringer and it be the only one on the peg after all shoes are pitched it shall score three points regardless of the position of his opponent's shoes, even if both be learners. In no event shall a leamer or learners detract any value from none or two ringers, the ringer shall score one point.

Papering Your Home Matter Of Great Importance

The papering of a room or rooms, at this time of the year is of far greater importance than most folks imagine. You've gone into rooms where you felt at home the minute you stepped through the door and again you've gone into homes where there was a jar the moment you entered. That's the difference between rightly and wrongly papered rooms. The one is restful and the other is out of harmony. We have the right papers for the rooms you will want to paper and we have a service in aiding you to select the right paper that you'll appreciate.

A Funnier Picture Than 'Hold Your Horses'

It might be said there are two stars to this picture—Tom Moore and Rupert Hughes, classified respectively as actor and author. The combination is irresistible. Though the tale begins with our hero as a lowly digger of ditches it ends—but that would be telling. We will only say you can't keep an Irishman down. And those Hughes' titles! You will laugh—and remember them.

DRINK ONLY MILK THAT YOU KNOW IS SAFE

And when we say "milk that you know is safe," we mean milk that has been put through the pasteurization process. That is the only process that positively destroys the greatest number of germs and bacteria in milk that comes from well-fed, contented cows.

The milk, given the closest care from the time it is taken from the cows until it reaches our plant, is put through the process that takes out the greatest possible number of germs and brings to you a milk that is not only pure but is high in nutritive elements.

Drink milk—drink lots of it, but be sure that it is pasteurized.

It Pays To Be Proud of Your Car

Keep it in the pink of condition—not only in good running order, but also in good appearance. An occasional refinishing adds to its life by keeping off the ravages of rust and decay. It also adds to its value when you want to sell.

Right now is a splendid time to have your car freshened up. Perhaps a coat of varnish is all that it needs.

Drive around and let us give you an estimate; or call us on the phone, and we will gladly send an experienced man to advise just what should be done to create that look of newness on your closed or open car.

CURE DIGESTIVE DISORDERS

Value of Charcoal as Preventive of Ailments Cannot Be Over-Emphasized.

The value of charcoal can scarcely be over-emphasized and it should be fed to fowls of all ages as a preventive of bowel disorders and disease. It is best to keep it before the fowls at all times, as there is no danger of them eating too much. Charcoal has a great purifying effect in absorbing noxious gases and will correct many digestive disorders.

Later Garden Planting.

Later garden vegetables require less work and less anxiety, as a rule, than early vegetables. The soil should be neither too hard to prepare nor should it be so slow to germinate and start growing the plants as early plantings.

Advantage of Clover.

When the ground in cultivated fields becomes hard and dry in the growing season we should know that the soil is calling for humus. The best humus is made by growing clover.

BIG IMPORTANCE OF ROOSTER

Impossible to Get Best Results With-out Use of Good Male—Is Half the Flock.

The male is half the flock. Without a good male it is impossible to get good results. It is more dangerous however, to use a poor male than it is a poor female for the reason that from one male bird a greater number of chicks carrying his blood will be hatched than where a poor female is allowed to remain in the flock.

MALES FOR BREEDING STOCK

Not Advisable to Wait Until Last Minute to Select Fowls to Head Poultry Flock.

Don't wait until the last minute to buy males for your poultry breeding pens. If you do, the best will be gone and you'll have to take what's left. A breeder sells by process of elimination, disposing of the best first. So, the earlier you buy, the better will be the stock you get.

LEGS ARE QUITE IMPORTANT

Not Only Necessary as Means of Loco-motion, but They Help Appearance of Fowls.

The legs of fowls are important not only as a means of locomotion but also in regard to the appearance of the fowls. Therefore, the legs deserve proper care and attention from every poultry raiser.
